Three-Sided Party Fights to Feature Western Elections

Nominations Closed in Fifty-One of Seventy Constituencies in Four Western Provinces—Lists for Urban Ridings to Be Completed Next Monday—Vote to Be Week Later

Premier Faced With Straight Fight in Prince Albert Seat

(Canadian Press)

WINNIPEG, July 14.—As candidates filed into line today in nomination proceedings in fifty-one of the West's constituencies, a plethora of three-sided party fights was brought to light. In no less than thirteen of Saskatchewan's twenty-one ridings there will be three-man battles; Manitoba will have at least two three-cornered and another of five. Two tripartite tests are listed in Alberta and one in British Columbia.

Of the seventy widely extended constituencies where early nominations for the July 28 election were held today, all but nineteen were in the four provinces of the West. The remainder of the nominations will be recorded one week before balloting itself.

Double-barreled opposition to Premier Mackenzie King which was expected in Prince Albert did not develop, but three of his Cabinet ministers find themselves facing double opposition for their seats. George Braden will bear the Conservative standard against the Prime Minister in Saskatchewan's northley riding.

What had been expected to be a straight party fight between Hon. C. A. Dunning, the Minister of Finance, and Frank Turnbull, Conservative, for the Regina seat, developed into three-party fight with the entrance of Lieut.-Col. R. A. Carman, prominent barrister, on the Independent ticket. In the election of 1926, Hon. Mr. Dunning polled a majority of 825 votes over the Conservative candidate who was in the field with him.

TWO FACE CRERAR

Hon. T. A. Crerar, Minister of Railways, faces D. W. Beautner and one of the several women contesting for parliamentary honors in the West, Miss Beatrice Brigden, Labor, in Brandon.

In Melville, Sask., Hon. W. R. Motherwell finds G. N. Marth, Conservative, and J. M. Thomas, Farmer candidate, contesting with him for the constituency which gave him a majority of 4,156 votes in the last election. He faced a straight party fight against a Conservative on that occasion.

The lone acclamation recorded in today's proceedings went to Robert

KOREAN FLOOD TOLL IS 220

Disaster in Southern Province Is Reported as Worst of Series During Past Week

BUDDHIST PRIESTS PERISH IN TEMPLE

TOKIO, July 15.—The death toll of floods in Southern Korea leaped to at least 220 today. A Tokiyo dispatch to the Tokio Nichinichi, vernacular newspaper, said 117 perished in addition to 103 mentioned in dispatches from Seoul yesterday.

The Tokiyo dispatch indicated floods in Kaishobokudo Province were the worst of the last week's series of disasters in Southern Korea.

One river rose about sixteen feet in a few hours, washing away a Buddhist Temple, fifty monks of which were reported missing.

The island of Formosa also was suffering from the torrential rains. Dispatches reported five deaths from various parts of the island. Heavy dispatches yesterday said many persons were injured by floods. Landslides in the Takiyo district took heavy toll of life and property through which the affected provinces. Scores of thousands were homeless.

120 DIE IN FLOODS

LONDON, July 14—An Exchange telegraph dispatch from Tokio reported 120 persons drowned in floods in Korea Sunday.

Many others are missing, including fifty priests whose temple was overwhelmed in a landslide.

NATIONALISTS ISSUE JOINT MANIFESTOS

North China Factions Denounce President and Pledge Union to Work for His Elimination

NEW GOVERNMENT MAY BE RESULT

(Copyright, 1930, by The Chicago Daily News Foreign Service)

PEIPING, China, July 14—Delegates of various Kuomintang, or Nationalist party, factions opposed to the Nanking regime, who have been conferring fruitlessly in North China for several months in an effort to patch up their differences, have issued a series of joint manifestos denouncing President Chiang Kai-Shek and pledging themselves to work unitedly for his elimination.

This action, taken yesterday, is regarded in some quarters as a definite step towards the establishment of a new National Government in Peiping, but well-informed observers prefer to regard it as a political gesture designed to regularize the position of the Northern allies, should a suitable opportunity arise to set up a separate administration.

With a stalemate existing on all the civil war fronts, further action is likely to be indefinitely postponed, it is thought.

YUKON HOTEL PREY TO FIRE

G. BLACK, CONSERVATIVE CANDIDATE, AND OTHER GUESTS ROUTED FROM BED

Loss Is Estimated at $40,000—Nothing Was Saved But All Escaped Injury

MAYO, July 14—Fire breaking out at 3.30 Sunday morning completely destroyed J. E. Bine's hotel, general store and adjoining pool hall and barber shop.

Guests, including Captain George Black, former Member of Parliament and Conservative candidate for the Yukon, and his wife, were aroused by Jack Nicholson and C. Washington, employees of the hotel. No lives were lost.

The loss is estimated at $40,000. Nothing was saved. No other buildings were burned. Some one in socks was damaged by fire.

LIEUT. DESMOND BURKE

BIRLEY CAMP, England, July 14.—Lieut. Desmond Burke, Governor-General's Foot Guards, Ottawa, Monday won the 1929 clasp to the King's medal, which is given to the champion shot of the military forces of Canada. Lieut. Burke won the medal in 1928 and his first clasp in 1927. He is also a former King's Prize winner.

Strange Epidemic Follows Quake in East India State

GANGTOK, Sikkim, India, July 14.—The populace of this little state is greatly worried by a mysterious epidemic, which since the earthquake of a few days ago has claimed forty-five lives. Many others are ill and not expected to survive. The earthquake, disturbing the earth's surface, are believed to have uncovered dormant germs, to which the people were exposed. The disease is greatly like cholera.

D. B. PLUNKETT IS CHEERED AT VICTORIA WEST

GRAB-BAG BUDGET SHOWS PATCHINESS

A well-attended meeting heard D. B. Plunkett, Conservative candidate for Victoria, in the Ward One district, at Gaudin Hall yesterday evening. The candidate was supported by James H. Beatty, M.P.P., and Capt. H. W. R. Moore. Alex. Monteith presided. Mr. Plunkett was given a rousing reception, and was cheered heartily at the end of a quietly toned but constituting address.

Mr. Plunkett took concrete examples of the effect of tariff reduction sorted out as said by the late Liberal administration in a spasmodic manner, without regard to the ramation that followed in many lines of Canadian endeavor.

More than one instance of this "catch-as-catch-can legislation" by the Federal Government could be seen in Victoria, continued the speaker, referring to the hardship caused the Biker Manufacturing Company by the reduction of the import duty on children's wagons, sleds and similar toys of from 7½ to 5 per cent.

Earlier in the day the candidate addressed an enthusiastic meeting at the British America Pulm Company's plant at Laurel Point, where

PROGRESSIVE CHIEF WINS ACCLAMATION

Robert Gardiner Returns to Next Session of Parliament Without Having to Fight for Seat

CALGARY, July 14.—Robert Gardiner, Progressive leader, returns to the next session of Parliament without having to fight for his seat in the July 28 elections. He was accorded an acclamation for the Acadia constituency seat when no opposition was forthcoming at the official nomination proceedings this afternoon.

HUNGARY TO MAKE PRINCE OTTO RULER

Surrounding Powers Believed to Have Entered Political Deal in Plan to Restore Monarchy

JUGOSLAVIA KING AGREES TO PLANS

Other Nations Given Guarantee Against Any Encroachment of Present Territory

BY JOHN DUNTHER

VIENNA, July 14.—Jugoslavia will not object to the return of Otto as King of Hungary, provided Hungary agrees not to cast any future claims over Jugoslav territory, is the gist of a sensational political deal reported today from Belgrade.

Prince Rastus, of Bourbon, brother of former Emperor Zita, Otto's mother, recently arrived in Belgrade as Hungarian emissary, and there had long discussions with King Alexander, of Jugoslavia. Prince Rastus told King Alexander that Otto's return was sooner or later inevitable, and that if Jugoslavia would not oppose it, then Hungary would agree to change its revisionist programme and forswear any efforts to regain territory taken from Hungary and given to Jugoslavia by the treaty of Trianon.

King Alexander, realizing the danger of Hungary doubtless to retrieve Jugoslav territory in the event of trouble with Italy, consented. He said that he would not personally oppose Otto himself, if Hungary would agree to this pledge to divert revisionist attempts from Jugoslavia.

HUNGARY IS WILLING

Prince Rastus could not speak for the present Hungarian Government, but Hungary doubtless is willing, especially since Jugoslavia got less territory from Hungary than did the other powers of the little entente, Czechoslovakia and Rumania.

BANKER SHOT IN COURT AT LOS ANGELES

Motley Flint Murdered as He Left Witness Box by Man Who Held Seven-Year Grudge

WAS PROMINENT IN FINANCIAL CIRCLES

LOS ANGELES, July 14—A spectacular career from factory helper to millionaire closed in tragedy today when Motley H. Flint, retired banker, aged sixty-five, was shot to death in a courtroom by Frank D. Keslon, fifty-six-year-old Inglewood, Cal., realty man.

Brooding over financial ruin by loss of savings seven years ago prompted the killing.

The victim for years was a leading figure in political, banking and motion picture financial circles in Los Angeles. Some thirty years ago he was postmaster here, and he was the brother of the late Frank B. Flint, former United States senator.

SAW SHOOTING

By WALTER A. SINCLAIR

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 14.—"You have no definite recollection as to just how the gun was disposed of, have you, Mr. Flint?" was the final question of Attorney Barry Brannan, for the plaintiff.

"I couldn't positively state. No, sir."

SACRAMENTO, Cal., July 14.—Five miners died of suffocation when trapped today by a surface fire in the Glenn Mine, Robertson's Flat, Placer County. Thirty bodies were recovered from a 2,000-foot tunnel this afternoon. The fire destroyed all the mine surface buildings and started a forest fire.

NOTED PILOT DROWNED IN PLANE CRASH

Lieut. J. D. Vance, Famous War and Civilian Flyer, Lost Life in Great Bear Lake Monday

AIDED IN SEARCH FOR LOST MINERS

TORONTO, July 14.—Crashing into Hunter Bay on the east end of Great Bear Lake while attempting to make a landing obscured by smoke and fog, Lieut. J. D. Vance, of Toronto, was drowned today, according to information received by Colonel C. D. H. Macaskie, president of the Dominion Explorers, the company for whom Lieut. Vance was pilot.

"Minto" Pirate, of Schreiber, Ont., who was a passenger in the plane, escaped with cut hands.

An examination of the plane revealed that apparently Lieut. Vance was thrown headlong through the window of his cockpit into the water. His body has not yet been recovered.

Vance held an enviable record among aviators, both in wartime and peace flying. A member of the independent air force in France, he

RATIFICATION OF NAVY PACT NOW IN SIGHT

Agreement Between U.S. Senate Leaders Paves Way for Early Approval of Treaty

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Agreement was reached among Senate leaders today on a modification of the Morris reservation to the London Naval Treaty which was declared acceptable to both its author and friends of the pact.

The agreement, which was conferred to be acceptable also to President Hoover, removes a point of dispute in the treaty debate and advocates of the pact were confident tonight of early ratification, probably some time next week.

Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska, the author of the reservation, agreed to eliminate the preambles of his resolution of reservation which called attention to the refusal of President Hoover to give the Senate Ri the notes exchanged among the powers leading up to the London Conference. The reservation itself declares the United States shall not be bound by any secret agreements or understandings not incorporated in the treaty itself.

Lions Prey on Cattle Herds In S. Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, July 14.—Every so often South Africa gets a reminder that it is not yet completely transformed from the wild.

A troop of lions, believed to number more than thirty, marauding like countryside around Barberton last night, killed seventy head of cattle and two natives tending them.

Farmers organized a commando Saturday night with carbines, hoping to bag the lions. The raiders, meanwhile, were enjoying half a dozen dinners miles away.

The lions have come from Kruger National Park, following the migration of wild beasts, their staple diet. They are causing general alarm, especially among travelers using the main automobile highway between Johannesburg and Lourenco Marques. Two hundred farmers are gunning for the marauders.

KING HECKLED BY CROWD ON LABOR STAND

Premier Given Rough Time on His Unemployment Attitude in Saskatchewan Capital

NOW SAYS FEDERAL AID WILL BE GIVEN

BY RAY BRENN

Canadian Press Staff Correspondent.

REGINA, July 14.—A great crowd, hot weather, and an element in the audience which shouted, booed and shot questions and interjections at the platform, combined to make Premier Mackenzie King's meeting here this evening one of the most strenuous of the campaign. Once again unemployment was the bone of contention. To its discussion the Prime Minister devoted the major part of his speech.

The Province of Saskatchewan had made no request for Federal assistance to meet unemployment, asserted Mr. King with emphasis. And why had it not done so?

ANSWERS PREMIER ON PUBLIC WORKS

Conservative Leader Tells Packed House King Should Consider His Own Statements Before Attacking Others—Flays Prime Minister for Objecting to His Pledge on Bridge

Condemns Tariff Policy for Its Schedules for Textiles

By THOMAS SHEEN

Canadian Press Staff Correspondent.

SHERBROOKE, Que., July 14.—In a vigorous speech before an audience crammed into the Armories here tonight, Hon. R. B. Bennett sharply rebuked the "red-end statement of Premier King that the Conservative leader had promised public works, which might disqualify Opposition Candidates.

"Well," Mr. Bennett exclaimed, "if there is any man on earth who knows something about such matters it is Mr. King.

"Only the other day at Vancouver, he promised the Fraser River outlet. At Prince Albert, in a previous election he said, 'If you send me supporters I will give you a railway,' referring to the Hudson Bay Railway.

"The other week at Saint John, N.B., I pledged my support to a bridge to which the Government had promised to contribute, and I questioned why the delay. But this Government always delays. Mr. King seems to object to that. His idea is to promise to do something and then do nothing when in power. If there is any disqualifying to be done I recommend the Premier to consider his own position in Prince Albert and his promises there and elsewhere in this and previous elections."

HITS AT BUDGET

For the tariff policies of the Liberal Government in the textile schedules, the Conservative chieftain expressed severe condemnation in this very city, reduced production, he continued, was evidenced. Near London, Ont., nine wooden mills had been closed. Why did not Canada supply her hosiery requirements, he went on. Japan, employing girls at 12 cents per day, was selling stockings at 80 cents per dozen.

"Do you are where that leads to?" Mr. Bennett asked. "It means closing up our mills, throwing our men out of work and helping the prosperity of countries with low standards of wages, or owing to it that our Canadians get a decent living wage and produce their requirements in Canada."

He went on, "the reason for unemployment in the textile industry is because we have permitted unfair competition against Canadian producers."

The Minister of Railways and Canals, Hon. T. A. Crerar, only a few years ago, Mr Bennett proceeded, had questioned what cotton mills amounted to other than the employment of a few men.

"Now can you hope for developments," the Conservative leader asked, "if you have a minister with that important portfolio holding that view."

Late tomorrow afternoon, Mr Bennett will speak at Three Rivers before re-entering Ontario.

"Premier King collected in 1926 more revenue from Canadian people than in any other single year, except one, in the history of this country," Mr. Bennett declared. The King Government, he said, should had increased taxes, the sales tax for instance, up to per cent. Here Mr Bennett said the Government now was claiming credit for having reduced taxes, taxes which they had previously increased.

SEEK FLYER IN BURMESE WILDERNESS

Australians Crashed in Dense Forest—One Rescued—Other Still in Woods

NATIVE SEARCHERS PENETRATE JUNGLE

(Copyright, 1930, by the Herald American Newspaper Alliance)

PROME, Burma, July 14.—James Matthews, whose plane crashed in the dense jungle near here while he and his companion, E. L. Hook, were trying to fly from London to Australia in record time, drew a vivid picture for me today of the extraordinary hardships he and Hook endured after they were forced down.

Matthews said: "After we left Akyab on July 3 we encountered a heavy rainstorm, which made crossing the Yoma Mountain very dangerous, but we flew on anyway in an effort to make a success of our attempt at the record.

"Six hours after our departure from Akyab the plane crashed from a height of fifty feet into a thick bamboo jungle. There was nothing to be seen in the way of habitations or other signs of civilization for miles around.

COMPANION COLLAPSED

"Fortunately the crash was not bad one and we landed unhurt. We decided the only thing to do was to take what stores we could carry, leave the machine and walk in search of some dwelling. But the jungle was so thick we walked in circles and after an hour on foot we found ourselves back near the plane. We set off again in an easterly direction and after a time we struck a stream, which we followed with great difficulty. We kept on this trail for almost seven days. As a result of heavy rains the stream was at full flood.

"At the end of seven days, Hook, who was fatigued even before leaving

VANCOUVER TURNS DOWN BY-LAWS TO HELP UNEMPLOYED

VANCOUVER, July 14—A motion to submit money by-laws early this year to relieve unemployment was defeated in the City Council this afternoon by a vote of six to five.

Alderman R. N. Fraser introduced a motion to place before ratepayers money by-laws, September 10, to construct roads, sewers and water works with a view to providing productive work during the coming Winter, but immediate opposition developed.

PEACEMAKERS BUSY IN INDIA

Definite Efforts Being Made to Improve Situation Before Conference at London

DECLINE NOTED IN GANDHI CAMPAIGN

SIMLA, India, July 14.—Peacemakers occupied the center of the stage today in the turbulent Indian situation, making definite efforts to bring about a better atmosphere preparatory to the impending London Round Table Conference.

Motion bodies made moves in this direction and certain significance. Experienced observers believe the political atmosphere was better today than any time recently. An official resume of the situation in the country as a whole for the end of last week said took a cautiously optimistic view. It stated recent indications of a decline in the civil disobedience activities had been maintained.

A recrudescence of unrest on the Northwest frontier, and in several Indian towns as students returned from their vacations resulted in new conflicts.

In Bengal it was said today, though the civil disobedience movement as a whole was decreasing, a tendency toward violence was growing and there were signs the Terrorist party might become active.

DEADLOCK OF NAVIES ENDS

Acceptance of Italian Proposal for Shipbuilding Holiday Smooths Relations With France

NEW WORK STOPPED UNTIL END OF YEAR

By RALPH C. POTTS

(Copyright, 1930, by The Chicago Daily News Foreign Service.)

ROME, July 14—Acceptance in a modified form of the Italian proposal for a naval holiday during the period of London conference on naval negotiations, is considered in foreign circles here to have broken the deadlock, which has been aggravating the relations between the two countries for months.

Indeed, officials believe that the European political atmosphere is clearer as the result of this first step. Arrestide Briand's favorable reply to Italian Foreign Minister Dino Grandi's proposal for a naval holiday, than it has been since the close of the London Naval Conference.

It is now virtually certain that the Italian Government will give orders for cessation of the naval building programme, following M. Briand's announcement to the Foreign Affairs Commission of the Chamber of Deputies, that France would lay down no further naval units until the end of December of the current year.

Italy, of course, would not have the naval holiday extend for the full period of these negotiations, but she is ready to agree to the French modified holiday rather than see no holiday at all.

Despite the customary reticence, official circles have given the impression that the French note has already been received, but its ratification is being withheld until the document is fully examined.

Undoubtedly this latest beneficial development will tend to arrest the sour press and politics on both sides of the money Alps, and pave the way to amicable discussion of the naval aspirations of the Franco-Italian points at issue.

EXPRESSES PLEASURE

LONDON, July 15.—Prime Minister MacDonald told the House of Commons today that the British Government had learned with pleasure of arrangements made by the governments of Italy and France with a view of facilitating resumption of discussions on naval questions.

Mr. MacDonald said the British Government hoped these French-Italian conversations would complete the work of the London Naval Conference and that the principles of naval limitation as contained in Part 2 of the London Naval Treaty would be applied to all parties of the conference.

He said it was not necessary for the British Government to take any action in this connection regarding the British naval programme of 1931 since this was purely for necessary replacements within the reduced tonnage limits imposed by the treaty.

he referred to the removal of the 11½ per cent preference on imported worsted yarns, an act of the late Government which had come as a blow to the B.C. Worsted Mills Limited, a Victoria undertaking financially backed by the City of Victoria.

POLICY OF FEAR

It was great and sudden changes of this sort which had affected the business of the country, and the results of which resembled to bear testimony against a policy which had as its basic formula a fear of the United States and no little regard for the rights of Canadians living and doing business in their own land, continued Mr. Plunkett.

Similar hardship had been caused from a like action on the part of the Liberal regime at Ottawa in the furniture trade, where manufacturers were suffering from unfair competition, forced on them by the Canadian Government, he said. Yet in the dying hours of its life the Mackenzie King administration, with divided counsels within its own ranks, sought a renewal of the power which it had used so disastrously to the Dominion as a whole.

TARDY PENITENCE

"The Mackenzie King administration now seeks to adopt protection in a semi-protective way," continued the Conservative candidate. "Do you believe in a political leaper turning penitent on the eve of an election? Can you trust such a one if you do believe in his penitence?

"Of my own leader, Mr. Bennett, I say that we can believe he will keep his word. He spoke straightforwardly in favor of protection, for the manufacturer, the workingman and the consumer, and this protection would be made a real factor and put on the statute books of the country.

"In my political life I have ever tried to make no promise of statement that I could not carry out. I have often been asked by those who say, 'Plunkett, you stand for this and that.' And I say, 'Yes! But I will not say or promise anything unless I know that I can carry it through. I want no better endorsation than that," continued the speaker.

The candidate recited the attitude taken by the Liberal Government in its refusal to extend the minimum wage standards in the provinces. As a practical mechanic he appreciated what technical training meant to the youth of Canada, he said.

TRAINING NEEDED

"If we train our youths we need fear no nation, for they will have everything they want to make their way," continued Mr. Plunkett.

It was the same with other projects of national importance to Canada, he said, and which had been turned aside by the Liberal regime without regard to how necessary they were for the growth and prosperity of the country. National health measures had been attacked, the national highway plan and many others.

On the other hand, Mr. Bennett stood fairly and squarely in favor of these projects as necessary for the development of the country. On the highway plan, he would say that time in Canada would be hard this coming Winter, and that a network of highways from coast to coast in Canada, which would have led to the expenditure of $10,000,000 in British Columbia, would have been both a necessary work and a most welcome relief. The highway was needed to promote greater understanding between East and West and for the creation of that better knowledge and regard of Canada as a whole from which would grow the national spirit.

WERE NOT AFRAID

"We did not have to detour with our railways because we had men at the head of the country who were not afraid and who knew how to act. Why do we have to detour with our roads? When the cost of a national highway was so small, why allow Mr. King accept it? He would have been a better Canadian if he had. He said it would require a change in the B.N.A. Act, but he had no hesitation in changing the B.N.A. Act one week or so before the election in connection with the return of the natural resources to the provinces.

BACKBONE REQUIRED

"We will stop the flooding of our country with United States goods when Canada has the backbone to get up and do it, and not before. Then the factories will come across the border and you would have a genuine nation, and one that would give good service to the British Empire," continued Mr. Plunkett.

Dominion public servants in New Westminster and Victoria were working in some instances seven hours a day, in spite of the eight-hour-day legislation, continued the candidate, who said that this was another instance of the flouting of the will of the people by the Federal Government.

Mr. Plunkett said, in closing, that if he was returned, and he felt that he would be, he would serve at Ottawa in the interests of all members of his constituency, not just his political friends. But, above all, he would be loyal to the electors in every just means in their power of supporting Mr. Bennett, whose policies had been clearly laid before the people and who could serve "Canada first" when returned as the head of a Conservative administration.

JAMES R. BEATTY, M.P.P.

James R. Beatty, M.P.P., member for Victoria in the Provincial Legislature, paid a warm tribute to Mr. Plunkett, who, he said, had served his constituency faithfully at two sessions of the Federal House and whose return in support of Mr. Bennett would be the best business that Victoria could do at this time.

SOLID POLICIES

"I feel we have reason to be proud of the fact that we belong to the Conservative party of Canada," said Mr. Beatty. "If you look over the policies that have made Canada the solid enduring politics and those that are carried to the music of brass bands and crumbs, you will find that all our progress has been under Conservative politics.

"Playing with free trade was a futile gesture on the part of the late Government, he said, as free trade for Canada would mean its ruination, and everyone knew it. Its found Yakima apples in the stores in Ontario, but high import duties for Canadian materials going into the United States. The United States duty on No. 1 wheat from Canada was 42 cents a bushel, yet this wheat was taken and mixed in the United States and shipped back again in competition with Canadian wheat on the market of the world.

Mr. Bennett had been correct, when he said it was necessary to blast a way to increasing trade. Trade extension had come with apologies nor through soaking Canada's past legislators at Washington and London had been nice little social homes, but it would take experienced men, men trained in the business of the country, to promote any trade extensions worthy of the name, he said.

CHAMELEON POLICIES

Mr. King had one policy for British Columbia, another for the Prairies, and something else again for Ontario and the Maritimes. How would he put them all into effect, and if he were permitted to do so, what unification of Canadian life would spring from such a scheme.

Turning to results of past legislation, Mr. Beatty said twenty-one woollen mills had closed down in Canada following the tariff changes and others were working on half time. The boasted Liberal reduction in the sales tax from 6 to 5 per cent had been no reduction for the Liberals jumped the tax from 3 to 6 per cent to start with and then claimed credit for lowering it.

Mr. Beatty closed with an appeal for the consideration of the electorate and the prediction that majority rule would once more be in power when July 28 had passed, and that that rule would be conservative.

WHERE HE SERVED

Captain H. W. H. Moore moved a hit, with his analysis of the results of Liberal rule. Canada had lost nine years, he said, and the lost nine years, he said. When Britain was in the throes of a long and death struggle in 1914-16, Mr. Mackenzie King had been drawing a large salary from the Rockefeller Foundation, which had prevented to Canada to protect conscription, reversed Captain Moore.

The boasted British preference of the former Prime Minister was "annoufluge, said the speaker. Preference was to be shown on the importer by Canada of "mushrooms, cut flowers, asters, magic lanterns and cooking gas (if piped in)," he said, to laughter and applause. The truth was, he contended, that the famous tariff revision had been an affair of the last moment, and not even seemingly sensible. "They shut their eyes, put their hands in the tariff grab-bag, and that's what we got," he said, to laughter.

On the other hand, Mr. Bennett, the Conservative leader, had come forward with a policy for Canada which would be presented in the trade campaign in the United Kingdom. He had shown that Canada was ready to trade on a preferential basis, where there was a reasonable return in exchange. A British preference on Canadian wheat would mean much to Canada, and much could be given in return, he said.

Recent veteran legislation in the Federal House had been a non-partisan affair, with no credit to the former Prime Minister. Mr. Bennett had appealed for more humane laws for the treatment of soldiers and their pensions in 1927, he showed, and the Prime Minister had been at the head of those who voted it down.

AN ELECTION BUDGET

For the first time in the history of Canadian Parliaments the budget had been presented without any budget statement to show what the figures meant, and what the suggested taxation would produce, continued Captain Moore. It was, he suggested, an "election budget," and its makers did not give a statement of revenue because they did not themselves know what it would produce.

Captain Moore closed with an appeal to a few steps from the stand in Judge Frank C. Collier's Superior Court room to the City Hall tower.

I saw Motley Flint killed.

The banker had just finished testifying in the trial of David G. Selznick's suit to recover $25,000 from the Security-First National Bank. The case had been a ponderous one, its ramifications necessitating a trial which had lasted nearly three months.

This morning he was called for final examination. The case was nearing its close. Blackwelds had been dressed of their voluminous notations. Attorney W. A. Rowen asked a few questions and then dismissed Flint. Judge Collier waved him away.

Flint rose, a debonair figure in blue serge with a stripe, and blue collar set off with a white stripe. He look up his Panama hat, and, bowing to attorneys, moved to the gage of the sanctuary.

STEPPED TO DEATH

His lined, iron face had relaxed from the aggressive expression with which he had fronted all questioning. A slight, uncertain smile lighted his face as his gaze swept over me. Then he opened the courtroom enclosure gate and stepped down. The gate swung silently behind him. The door to the corridor was at his left. Before he could reach it, he bowed to Mr. and Mrs. Lewis S. Blackwell, and Myron Selznick, a son, who sat in the front row of spectators' opera chairs. David G. Selznick sat inside the rail with counsel.

The end chair of the first row was empty. From the chair back of it rose a man. A flash and a report startled the courtroom. I thought a cameraman had shot off a flashlight. A pause, then two more flashes, two more reports. A woman, Mrs. Selznick, was screaming. Motley Flint collapsed backward full length, his head almost touching the enclosure gate.

I saw him collapse. We who were inside the rail rose and surged forward. Although I could see the flashes and the revolver, I did not see Frank D. Keaton until I had run forward to look around a pillar which hid him from me. He had dropped back into his seat, holding up his hands, while a facetious expression modeled his plain face.

Keaton alleges that he lost money through the purchase of some bank stock in one of Flint's concerns some years ago.

PROMINENT FINANCIER

Motley Flint was born February 16, 1865, in Boston, Mass. He attended high school in San Francisco, and later came to Los Angeles. He served as postmaster here from 1896 to 1904. Later he became president of the American Bank & Trust Company, and was affiliated with various other firms of the city in the capacity of president, vice-president and member of board of directors.

Included among these were the Pacific Pacices Company, of which he was president; First National Bank, where he was a member of the board of directors; the B. K. Dyas Corporation, and was vice-president of the Pacific Southwest Bank until he was indicted in the recent Julian Petroleum Corporation overissue case, a charge of which he was recently cleared.

Gardiner, Progressive leader in the House of Commons, in the Alberta riding of Acadia he was returned without opposition when no other candidate put in an appearance. Mr. Gardiner polled a majority of 5,122 votes over his Conservative opponent in the last election.

Three women stepped into the fray today, two as Farmer candidates and one as a Laborite. In addition to Miss Bridgen, in the three-cornered Brandon contest, the others are Mrs. Ida McNeal, in Long Lake, and Mrs. Anna Hollis, in Maple Creek, Saskatchewan ridings. Both Mrs. McNeal and Mrs. Hollis are contested against opposition heads, each against the Liberal format of the seat in the last House, and a Conservative.

TWO-PARTY FIGHTS

Adherents of the United Farmers of Alberta party lined up in each of the twenty-six constituencies recorded as U.F.A. seats in the distinctive organization. The exception of Acadia, where Robert Gardiner was returned unopposed, all other seats of Farmer members entered a straight contest. A three-cornered test will ensue in Wetaskiwin, where William Irvine seeks re-election.

In all, 120 candidates stepped into the field in fifty-one of the West's sixty-eight constituencies at the advance nomination, a fact which is a fact because of the widespread extent of the electoral divisions in question. The remaining constituencies in the West where nominations will be held a week from today are all urban localities.

Conservative nominees in the West advance lacing outnumbered Liberals by thirty-nine to thirty-six, with Saskatchewan contributing the largest number to each list. Twenty largest number to each list. Twenty Liberals and fifteen Conservatives are nominated in the wheat province's advance records—a Liberal in every constituency. Actually, only one Saskatchewan constituency will nominate next week, namely Moose Jaw.

To swell the ranks of Government supporters, eight Liberal-Progressives are nominated in the running, seven in Manitoba. Progressive total six, three in Saskatchewan and two in Manitoba, and one in Alberta, while Manitoba has one Independent-Liberal and one Independent-Progressive.

Labor adherents are limited to three in the advance list, two in Manitoba and one in the Coast province.

TWO LABOR-FARMERS

Two Labor-Farmer candidatebearers are recorded, one in Manitoba and one in British Columbia. The new-formed Saskatchewan Farmers' Political Association has entered nine supporters. John Nawtowsky, in the three-sided Redkirk contest is the only Communist down on the lists.

Independents are rare. Only three out-and-out Independents, all in Saskatchewan, have put up their names. Manitoba's three Independents include one Liberal-Progressive, Liberal and Progressive. A single candidate, backed as Co-operative, is in the running; he is J. F. Creighton, President of the Association of Robert Mackenzie, Liberal, in Assiniboia.

"The fact that no representations were made from this province convinces me that the Provincial Government did not want assistance," he continued.

"Then and then a chorus of "boos" was the response to this.

"I'm not going to let this unemployment situation become a political issue," went on the speaker.

PLAYING POLITICS

He charged that "there had been a great game in the hall of politics with the unemployed of this province." He asserted, with the utmost force, that if the Premier of Saskatchewan would make application, "I am prepared to say to him that, under the relief and assistance that municipalities will give, the Dominion will give a dollar."

No applications for assistance, which could be presented to Parliament, had been received, the Prime Minister insisted, to deal with statements attributed to Premier Tolmie of British Columbia and Hon. A. C. Stewart, Minister of Highways, that application had been made for relief, and insisted that no direct application, which could be regarded as such, had been made.

In the running fire of interruptions which occurred during the unemployment reference came frequent allusions to the five-cent piece" remark of the Prime Minister.

participated in many long distance aerobatic raids. After the war his ability as a pilot and his knowledge of the Handley Page machine were recognized by the British Government when he was chosen from the Royal Air Force as one of the pilots to carry British officials to the Peace Conference and subsequently on special missions to Egypt.

DETAILS ARE MEAGRE

Details of the accident are meagre. It is believed the pilot was making a sixty-mile hop to the company headquarters when he encountered the fog and smoke over the lake. Another plane from Chicago attempted to land, the glassy water, smoke and fog making it impossible the accident. Search for the body had been instituted, but the deep water at the point of the crash hinders operations.

Pilot Vance was one of the pilots who aided in the search for the Macalpine party some months ago. His plane became disabled at Baker Lake and he spent weeks with his companion, Brian Hindale, at that northern outpost until it was possible to travel to civilization by dog team. He refused to let his company take the risk of sending planes to get him out.

EDMONTON, July 14.—Caught in the swirling waters of the Pembina River and disappearing despite courageous efforts by the father of one of the girls to save them, John Miller, thirty-five, of Hazel Bluffs; Ida McMahonan, fourteen, Pickardville, and Lillian Vanniewen Huysten, Pickardville, were the victims of a drowning fatality at Lumford Bridge, ten miles south of Manola, Alta., late Sunday night.

Three others were rescued through the heroic efforts of Eugene Vanniewen Huysten, father of Lillian and a pioneer Belgian farmer. The three victims were drowned when they got beyond their depth.

TEACHERS OF MUSIC DEFEND CASE IN COURT

Issue Is Raised as to Whether Persons Teaching in Home of Pupils Must Take Out Licence

DECISION RESERVED UNTIL NEXT MONDAY

Is every person who gives private music lessons in this city, receiving payment therefor, liable to be fined in the City Police Court if he or she has not obtained a city licence and paid the required fee? This was the issue raised in a test case yesterday before Magistrate George Jay, when G. Jennings Burnett appeared in the City Police Court to answer to a charge of carrying on the profession of a music teacher without having a licence. Decision upon a constitutional question is also involved, together with the relevance of a general principle of legal interpretation of statutory classifications, which was invoked by H. A. Beckwith, counsel for the accused, under instructions from the Victoria Music Teachers' Association. The court reserved decision until next Monday.

Facts admitted by the parties are that a provincial statute purports to give the city the power to enact by-laws requiring all persons carrying on professions to obtain licences from the city and that such a by-law has been passed; also that on June 28 the defendant did not have a licence but was carrying on the profession of a music teacher, by giving individual instruction to pupils, either in their homes or at his.

INTERPRETATION

Mr. Beckwith argued that the province could delegate to the city only such powers as were within the jurisdiction of the province under the constitution. The provincial statute under which the charge was brought was, he held, ultra vires, in that it undertook to confer powers which the province itself could not exercise. The British North America Act allotted to the provinces the right to raise revenue by licences required from "shops, saloons, taverns and auctioneers, and other licences." "Other licences," he continued, meant other licences falling within the same classification or of the same type as those enumerated, and not other licences without restriction. Judgment to this effect had been given, he said, in the Supreme Court, in the case of Regina versus Mee Wah, in which the court had held that the clause in the British North America Act referred to commercial occupations and not to professions.

LEGAL PROFESSION

Magistrate Jay—Licences are required from members of the legal profession practising in the city.

City Prosecutor C. L. Harrison said that the issues raised had been brought before the courts when decisions by Magistrate Jay and by the Vancouver magistrate requiring licences from members of the legal profession, had been upheld in the higher courts.

Mr. Beckwith suggested that the judgment in the cases Mr. Harrison referred to should be presented, as an examination might show that it was based on reasons which did not apply in the present case.

PROFESSIONAL TEACHERS

A second point raised by the defense was that the by-law, in mentioning "academic and schoolrooms," indicated an intention to define the teaching profession so as to exclude those giving individual lessons at the homes of their pupils from the licensing requirement. Against this the prosecution cited the wording of Section 49, which refers to "any person following any profession."

Decision was reserved by the court for one week.

Chamber of Commerce Committee Discusses Auditorium Problem

The auditorium committee of the Chamber of Commerce met yesterday afternoon for some time with the problem of financing the construction of a building suitable for large gatherings, which it is hoped to construct on the vacant property on Belleville Street opposite the Crystal Garden.

No definite solution was reached, but possible combinations were discussed, and adjournment until Thursday was made with the understanding that various financial explorations will be made in the meanwhile by members of the committee.

PARKS GAIN POPULARITY

SUPERVISED PLAY INSTITUTED LAST WEEK PROVES GREAT SUCCESS BY CHILDREN

F. V. Shoemaker Issues Tentative Daily Schedule for Boys and Girls

A combination of Summer holidays and high temperatures is proving effective in turning the children by thousands in Victoria's parks, where the system of supervised play, instituted a few days ago, is proving a boon.

The most casual observer must have noticed the effect of this supervision. Children at Beacon Hill, Central and Victoria West Parks, where the supervisors are working, no longer play aimlessly or wander companionless about the grounds, but are drawn together into play groups under capable trained direction. Organized according to age and sex, the youngsters enter whole-heartedly into the games, tournaments, story-telling, folk-dancing and story-playing, and, while enjoying the healthy pastimes and commradeship of others of their own age are also learning the principles of true sportsmanship, co-operation, unselfishness, keenness, loyalty, punctuality and obedience.

Today is "Joining Day," and at each of the above districts boys and girls will be registered by the supervisors for the various groups. Mr. F. V. Shoemaker, boys' work secretary at the Y.M.C.A., being in general control of the plan. The following schedule will be roughly adhered to according to the present arrangement:

SMALL CHILDREN

10 a.m. to 11, tag games; 11 to 12, educational dramatics; 12 to 1 p.m., apparatus play; 1 p.m. to 3 p.m., man supervises entire grounds, no organized activities; 3 to 3, story-telling and story playing; 3 to 4, wading or nature adventure; 4 to 5, swinging; 5 to 6 women supervises entire grounds, no organized activities; 6 to 7, bath.

BOYS

10 a.m. to 11, apparatus play; 11 to 12, games; 12 to 1, handicraft; 1 p.m. to 3, league or tournaments; 3 to 7, quoits or horseshoes; 7 to 8 ebbe, 8 to 6, vary programme with bikes, camp fires or social entertainment.

GIRLS

10 a.m. to 11, stilts; 11 to 12, practice for play day and games; 12 to 1 p.m., educational dramatics; 2 to 3 p.m., handicraft, swimming and folk dancing; 4 to 7, games; 7 to 8 archery and quoits.

STORM DAMAGE IS ONLY SMALL

Victoria Escapes Serious Effects From Sudden Electrical Outburst

Despite the fact that Victoria was visited by one of its worst electrical storms in many years on Saturday night and early Sunday morning, only slight damage resulted. Reports from different parts of the island state that damage done by the storm was merely in the forests.

While several fires were started, the sudden outburst of rain following the storm quenched the flames and prevented any serious outbreaks.

Electrical discharges in Port Angeles are held responsible for the forest fire which was raging there early Sunday morning. As the flames were easily visible from the city, word of the fire spread, and Dallas Road was soon lined with automobiles as the occupants viewed the fire and watched the lightning display, one of the most spectacular here in years.

Salvage Princess Assisting Fishing Boat Fast on Reef

VANCOUVER, July 14 — Word was received by the Pacific Salvage Company today that its salvage vessel, Mr. Salvage Princess, stationed at Prince Rupert left for Granville Channel to assist a wrecked fishing boat. The report stated that on Saturday last the American halibut vessel Eskay, commanded by Captain H. Hansen, went aground on a reef two miles north of Union Pass, seven-five miles south of Prince Rupert, and was in danger of filling and sliding off with the tides.

It is understood the Salvage Princess has now got alongside and is proceeding with salvage operations.

DEVELOPMENT WORK OF YEAR IS REVIEWED

Annual Report Presented to Industrial Group of Chamber of Commerce Yesterday

MEMBERS OF NEW EXECUTIVE CHOSEN

At a meeting of the industrial group of the Chamber of Commerce, yesterday, the executive for the coming year was elected, and the annual report of the chairman was presented together with a special report on the new brush and tray manufacturing industry recently established here.

Members elected to the executive are G. H. Stevens, W. A. Lucey, G. M. Trupp, Herbert Pendray and James Parfitt. Another representative is to be elected from the Junior Chamber and the chairman of the group will subsequently be elected by the full executive.

A motion introduced by Frank Pearmine, with industrial interest, group should inquire into Up-Island freight rates and transportation services, was referred to the executive. Reginald Hayward, M.P.P., expressed the opinion that from his experience and observation, prompt and quick service was more important than the question of freight rates.

Chairman Parfitt reported that the people behind the brush and tray manufacturing industry thought it advisable for the present to confine their operations on a moderate scale. He said that he had assured them that they would have the support of the chamber when the time came to enlarge their operations.

HOME PRODUCTS EXHIBIT

Plans for the improvement of the Willows grounds include a building to be entirely devoted to manufacturers of Victoria and district, it was stated in the chairman's annual report, as follows:

"Every effort has been made by your group to encourage the continuance of home products exhibitions. From our investigations, however, it has been apparent that the majority of those interested in preparing exhibits are not in favor of the holding of such an exhibition in the Spring of the year as well as in the Fall of the year. Your executive therefore favored the proposal to re-operate with the British Columbia Agricultural Association during the Fall Fair, and many conferences were held with this object in view. At first it was found that the space available for manufacturers was decidedly insufficient, but after several interviews with officials of the Agricultural Association, we are now advised that they have included in their plans for the improvement of the Willows grounds, a building to be entirely devoted to the exhibition manufacturers of the Victoria district, with provision for sufficient accommodation to meet all home products exhibition requirements for many years.

CENTRAL SELLING AGENCY

"Another matter of importance which received our attention," says the report, "was the feasibility of establishing a central selling agency which might materially assist the smaller industries in marketing their products. Several of the smaller manufacturers attended a luncheon meeting of your industrial group, at which the question was thoroughly discussed and their various viewpoints recorded for further consideration. In this connection, the report reads, "we understand it was that a central selling agency could not be expected to give proper justice to the majority of the small industries, owing to the different problems, which differed in practically every instance, would be better solved by the manufacturers themselves."

WOOLEN MILL AND TARIFF

The effect of a tariff change on a Victoria industry is mentioned in the following paragraph:

"Where advisable, Cabinet Ministers from Ottawa have from time to time been interviewed, one important instance of this nature being prompted by an effort to secure the restoration of the 12½ per cent protective duty on wearing yarns. At the time this duty was taken off by the Dominion Government, one of our local manufacturing institutions was immediately handicapped in competing in the Canadian market. Your group is always prepared to render similar assistance to individual concerns where the assistance required is considered legitimate and reasonable."

INDUSTRIAL SURVEY

"With a view to further investigating local industrial possibilities," the report continues, "we undertook and completed an industrial survey, the data gathered in this connection having since been forwarded to the Bureau of Industrial Research at Ottawa, and we anticipate receiving in the very near future a report from that branch of the Dominion Government as to industries which might reasonably be expected to develop and thrive on Vancouver Island."

AIR SERVICE SECURED

The air service now given to and from this city is favorably commented upon.

"Taking into consideration," the report reads, "the important bearing which aviation has upon industrial development generally, your industrial group strongly supported the recommendations of the aviation committee of the Chamber of Commerce and through combined efforts in this connection, and the interest displayed by the Victoria City Council, a splendid passenger air service has been established between Victoria and the Mainland, and a further service is to be operated in the very near future."

When King Alexander says that he guarantees something personally, it is as good as law, since only last week Belgrade announced that the royal dictatorship would henceforth be permanent.

Another Hapsburg emissary, George Szerkovszky, former deputy in the Hungarian Parliament and legitimist leader, has since come from Budapest to Bucharest, possibly to suggest the same sort of deal to King Carol. Carol will be asked to support Otto's return.

Hungarian legitimists (not necessarily the Hungarian Government) will remove the Hungarian troops to Transylvania if Carol agrees. It is said here that Carol would be eager for any such agreement, since it would remove the chief fear of Rumania's foreign policy, namely, the danger of Hungarian aggression to regain Transylvania.

RUMANIA WOULD AGREE

No doubt if the Hungarian Government itself could be pledged to support such a deal, Rumania would accept with alacrity.

But a strong feeling exists in Hungary, at least in the present Government, that Rumanian consent to Otto's return would hardly be worth the giving up of the Transylvanian claims. In any case, should the Rumanian intrigue succeed as apparently the Jugoslav deal has already succeeded, then only Czechoslovakia would remain, supported by France, as an opponent of Hapsburg restoration.

The Hungarian newspaper Regel says today that former Empress Zita has sent communications to all members of the Hapsburg family living in Hungary and elsewhere in Central Europe asking that they prepare to give oaths of allegiance to Otto, when he comes of age in November this year. The letters (signed by the public schools "—Alfred E. Smith.

CONSERVATIVE TRADE POLICY

There is nothing so clear cut and devoid of ambiguity in the present election campaign as the policy put forward by Mr. R. B. Bennett, the Conservative leader. What he proposes to do, in a fiscal sense, if elected to power, is to build up, first, Canada's trade, then intra-Empire trade and, thirdly, trade with the rest of the world. Obviously the most important market for the produce of the Dominion is that which lies nearest to his hand, namely, the market at home. It is in that market that he should be on the easiest footing; that is the one where, if necessary, his goods should be protected. It is not adequate protection now because our producers have to strive too hard to meet the competition of foreign grain, butter, meat, fruit and vegetables.

If a national Government has a national mission in its fiscal administration a very important part of it should be to see that those for whom it administers have their own markets for their own products. This is exactly what Mr. Mackenzie King has failed to do. He has allowed the United States to become a selling agency of prodigious growth within the confines of the Dominion. We import goods to the value of some hundreds of millions more from American manufacturers than we did when Mr. Mackenzie King assumed office. His policies in this regard have been pro-American, because had industry at home been fostered the majority of what we brought from the outside could have been produced in Canada. It is in this, as well as in a number of other respects, that the present Government at Ottawa has failed to measure up to its responsibilities. Here is the attitude taken by Mr. R. B. Bennett. He says:

"I will tell you one thing. In the first session of Parliament after July 28, when we will be in power, we will enact legislation that will give Canadians an equal opportunity through the protection of our agriculture, our industry and labor, and will insure the consumer against exploitation by producers. We propose to do that in the first session, or perish in the attempt. This country must reach self-reliance, or we are doomed to become more and more dependent. What is my business in life? It is to see that this country gets a chance to develop, to help make Canada as great a country as possible, and the only way is to see that the farmers have an equal chance with those who are trying to take their markets away from them. You ask no favors. You can grow anything that can be produced here as well as anywhere else in the world, but you do not want competition of people whose products ripen before your products ripen, and who, after selling all the wheat they can in their own country, dump the surplus here."

LUMBER MARKETS

At a time when there is considerable slackness in the British Columbia lumber market there ought to be an even more determined effort than is being made to find fresh markets and expand the existing ones. There is a mission to Australia at the present time to acquaint the Commonwealth in our timber products. There ought to be a mission, undertaken by the lumbermen themselves, to Great Britain as well. It has always been more or less of a mystery why so little British Columbia timber is sold in the Motherland. That country imports immense quantities of timber every year, and a very large proportion of it has been taken from Russia. In November last the Soviet Government refused to sell any more to the British syndicate which had been Russia's best customer for timber. Now the Soviet Government has reversed its policy. It has informed a big buying corporation in London and it is again willing to sell. Now, however, timber is to be purchased cheaper because prices have dropped.

In considering the possibilities of selling British Columbia lumber in Great Britain some questions arise. It is possible that the price of our lumber is too high in comparison with that imported to Great Britain from Scandinavia and Russia. It is possible, as well, that our lumber interests are not satisfactorily represented in the Motherland. At the same time, if markets elsewhere are reducing their demand, it seems as if a new and determined effort ought to be made to secure our share of the British market. It is better to have some markets, even if the price secured is not wholly satisfactory, than to have our mills closed down or working only part time.

FISCAL SHORTCOMINGS

The Liberal candidate in this constituency says the dairying industry is in a flourishing condition and is making big profits. That is hardly understandable because under the regime of Mr. Mackenzie King dairy cattle in Canada have declined by 140,000 head. The competition of New Zealand butter has led to the dairy farmers of Canada taking large losses; losses that have been recognized by the Prime Minister himself, who has agreed to the abrogation of New Zealand's inclusion in the Canadian-Australian Treaty and the imposition of four cents per pound duty on New Zealand butter next October.

It is not only in dairying that the agricultural industry is suffering under the present Government at Ottawa. The price of wool has fallen heavily. The value of farm land has shrunk. The arrangement of the Mackenzie King administration is bound up with practically all industrial effort in the country. A vacillating fiscal policy has led to our importing in growing quantities millions upon millions of dollars worth of goods which could be manufactured in Canada. Had they been manufactured here not only would there be no unemployment problem but hundreds of thousands of our population who have emigrated to the United States would have remained at home and added to the wealth and prosperity of the Dominion.

The plain fact, dominating all others in the present campaign, is that this country's industrial life needs more effective protection than it has received from the present Government at Ottawa. The whole trend of the Mackenzie King policies, to judge from returns of the Federal Department of Trade and Commerce, is in the direction of giving foreign countries greater opportunities of selling their goods in Canada at the expense of our own industrial ventures.

THE UNDERPAID TEACHER

It is all too seldom that the question of teachers' salaries is raised. It has come up before the Association of Edison Commissioners in Britain with Alderman J. H. S. Aitken, Nelson, appearing as the spokesman of the latter department for finding in a work which touches upon human life and upon man and women in the making. He believes that if men and women of high talents and gifts are to be recruited into the teaching profession, those of a type who will seek to achieve the ideals and objects of education, then there must be a good, if not a high standard of remuneration. "The school teacher," he says, "deserves the admiration and gratitude of the community. His material and social rewards are modest." He argues that better pay is built up on the groundwork of building up education itself. He says:

"Not merely the academic instruction in the school, but of even greater importance is the invisible atmosphere of the school, the environment of the child. The fact that life tends to become like that which is around it must ever be borne in mind. The personality of the teacher, the beauty of the school building, the aesthetic value of the school amenities, leave their impress upon the sensitive and retentive soul of the child, and are woven into the very tissue of its being. Largely from these sources character is formed, and the future welfare and destiny of the child determined. Education is today, at this critical and difficult period of our national history, of supreme and vital importance. In the reconstruction which is before our national life, fundamental amidst the urgent needs is that we should so maintain, if not increase, the social consequence and money reward of the teacher that young men and women of first-rate ability shall not be frightened away into other modes of life."

The Catholic Record of London, Ont., deprecates the use by Liberals in Quebec of race and creed cries, and, "an imaginary war in India," to inflame the population against the English-speaking people. Commenting on the manner in which the Liberals have held Quebec politically in the hollow of their hand for so many years past The Record says: "This is an undesirable condition; it is a provocative situation . . . It is a dangerous game, dangerous for the party that adopts it, still more dangerous for the peaceful progress of Canada's national development."

What lies behind Mr. W. T. R. Preston's description of the Liberal Party? For two generations he has been a powerful member of Liberalism and identified with all its political secrets. Again and again he has been the authorized agent of the Party and benefited largely by his connections with it. Now he charges Mr. Mackenzie King with committing enough sins "to bury the party for a generation." It is only a few years since he wrote an intensely partisan book on political history in the Dominion. His defection may well give rise to many speculations.

The declining earnings of the two great Canadian transcontinental railway companies are an outstanding indication of the straits reached by the Dominion under a Liberal Government at Ottawa. It is the duty of the people to examine the fiscal situation thoroughly and decide if they want to continue to test out the present administration or bring about a change designed for the conservation and development of Canada's industrial life.

Note and Comment

By R. B. D.

Nobody, clearly persons that every living creature lives to a state of war by nature.—Swift.

Let dogs delight to bark and bite,
For God hath made them so;
Let bears and lions growl and fight,
For that is their nature, too.
Say little hands were never made
To tear each other.—Watts

An item was printed in the newspapers the other day which reminded us of the case of Loeb and Leopold, two very young men of Chicago, who had seen so much of life in a very short time that nothing of an ordinary nature could stimulate interest or produce a sensation in their minds. So they planned a little boy, carried him off to a remote place in their motor car and tortured him to death just to see the reaction of the victim to their brutality. They had exhausted every other form of physical and mental sensation, and they wanted to observe the manner in which a human being would face death. The cold-blooded murderers were caught, convicted and sentenced, but we have always doubted whether the punishment fitted the crime.

In the neighborhood of Los Angeles a few days ago a little boy of seven caught a smaller boy of three, threw him in a stream of water and held his head under the water until the victim stopped struggling. The child was strangled to death. The bigger boy was trying an experiment. He had often tried such an experiment upon himself when in his bath; and he was curious to see whether the victim of his curiosity could stay so long under the water as he could. The last case was not one of cruelty; it was a case of inexperience. It was a horrible thing to do, of course. A casual reader of the newspapers can have no adequate idea of the horror of it. Only the parents of the children can have realized in full the horror of it.

The infant killer may have been of an abnormal type; but we are not so sure about that, for we have seen children doing things to their weaker companions, even in play, which adults would never think of doing to anybody. There are, of course, children who are naturally tender of heart, who abhor cruelty, and will fly in passion to the defence of any living thing which is being abused. On the other hand, children, like adults, are subject to the emotions occasionally exemplified in what is called mob psychology. They will gather in mass formation and tease and torture some little victim singled out for ridicule, and even occasionally report to violent measures in their frenzy of thoughtlessness. Such things have been going on from the beginning of time, and will continue until the end. We know they have been going on in the schools, and will continue to go on unless gentleness and tolerance towards the weak and helpless be adopted as a subject in our systems of education.

The natural tendencies of human nature in adults have also been illustrated in the Congress of the United States. Ever since the day he was elected to the position of chief executive Mr. Hoover has been pursued, hated, hounded and abused and circumvented by the Senate. For some reason or other, possibly because he came forward as an ordinary politician and had never taken an active part in public affairs until he was presented by his party as a candidate for the presidency, the Senators have resented the presence of a newcomer in the White House. At least they have acted as if the president were merely a pretender to the office instead of the chosen of the people by a tremendous majority. They refused to be accommodations in the matter of the tariff. Hoover asked for a tariff revision in the interest of the farmers. Congress revised the tariff in favor of interests which are hostile to the farmers and made the position of the farmers worse than it was before, protecting the utility monopolies of agriculture, but of nearly all the nations of the world.

But the fat in the fire did not burst into a blaze until the President, responding to the blandishments of Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, the British Prime Minister, became a party to a treaty calling for the gentlemen's naval disarmament. We said at the time that treaty was made that it was more likely to result in ill-will than in good-will; that it was a dangerous thing for nations to meddle with the affairs of other nations; that the only safe thing for nations to do was to attend strictly to their own affairs. That naval disarmament treaty cannot become effective until it receives the endorsement of the United States Senate. Not a nation in the world building warships, from one end Italy are building warships and making ample preparations for the construction of more warships.

Secret diplomacy was said to be a thing of the past. When representatives of the nations assembled to discuss and negotiate treaties they were to "put all their cards on the table." The United States Senators are opposing the naval disarmament treaty because it was conducted in strict secrecy. They say they have an equal right with the President to see all the cards that were placed upon the table. The President says if all the cards were placed upon the table, the purport of them would become public property, the newspapers would publish the contents of the documents, and that there is material in the documents which might prove offensive to friendly nations. So there is a deadlock at Washington. The Senate adjourns at this time of the year to a few degrees above the freezing point, and the fate of the treaty hangs in the balance.

The Rhyming Optimist

By Aline Michaels

Once I heard song made perfect,
Each noted crystal sphere;
Tossed to the winds of heaven,
Vibrant and pure and clear;
Pitching its joyous challenge
Forth to the coming dark,
Perfect, that exhausted
Song of the meadow lark.

Once I saw radiant beauty
Dim the Wenatchee Spring;
Meadows, amid hung, were shining
Under a silver sheen;
Poplars, three were standing,
Just as the dole is here;
There I saw beauty dancing,
Silver and green in the rain.

Once I watched peace unveiling
Its soul to my hungry gaze,
Calming the pulse of passion
After life's storm-stirred days;
Peace with its mystic power,
Ever seen and wise.
Peace, in its triumph, smiling
Out of an old man's eyes.

SAYS OLD COUNTRY DOES NOT DISPLAY FAITH IN CANADA

MONTREAL, July 14.—"Canada has unbounded opportunities," said Sir Keenan Jones, his arrival here on the Canadian Pacific liner Duchess of Atholl. "In the Mining country of Northern Ontario I saw things there that offered possibilities if only the capital could be supplied. There is not sufficient faith displayed in the Dominion by Old Country financiers."

Lord Rosedale is a pioneer in the Kirkland Lake district, and was prospected there in 1911 and 1912, and filed claims in 1912. He is certain that there is a lot of gold in that district that has not yet been discovered and comes out frequently on a combination business and pleasure trip each year. Some think more work is done on his claims, but in any event he has a good holiday on his 240-acre property near Swastika.

The time used is Pacific Standard for the 120th Meridian west. It is reckoned from 0 to 24 hours, from midnight so that afternoon hours are those of the latter portion. Dark water from low water, when there blocks occur in the tables, the tide flows or falls continuously during the successive tidal periods.

The height is in feet and tenths of a foot, measured from the average level of low water.

To find the depth of water on the sill of the Esquimalt Graving Dock at any time, add 30.5 feet to the heights of both water so above series.

The Dock has a depth of water on the sill of 30 feet at ordinary low water. The height of tide water so above given.

CHARMS ARE NOT DEFACED

Visitor From United States Full of Praise for Scenic Beauty on Canadian Tour

HOSPITALITY IS MUCH APPRECIATED

"Particularly striking and lovely to the motorist from the United States is the absence of billboards and advertising on the Canadian roads," is the declaration of Mrs. Doris Morrison, of Wenatchee, representative of the Automobile Club of Washington.

In an interview given to The Wenatchee World on return from a week-end trip into the Canadian lake region, Mrs. Morrison was lost in praise of all she had seen and experienced on the trip.

"It was lovely, simply gorgeous. Anything you can say about the scenery and beauty of the Cariboo-Fraser Lake region will not be exaggerated," Mrs. Morrison said.

THE PROPER SETTING

"One of the charms of the Canadian estates is that no matter how large the home is never seem out of place, because the grounds are always large enough for a proper setting." Mrs. Morrison explained. Another thing which added much to the beauty of the places we saw was the fact that they used so much of the natural shrubbery as possible. Not a weed, only where something was absolutely needed.

Speaking of the wonderful scenery of the Canadian highway system, Mrs. Morrison said, "Wonderful, and most of them were paved roads."

PLEASED WITH RECEPTIONS

"Persons who have heard of the Canadians as being reserved and cold, certainly have not heard from us. The Morrison reception, I have never had a more hospitable greeting than we received, and I never saw anyone who would do more to make one feel at home in a strange place."

CUNARD ORDERS GREATEST SHIP

Canadian Representative Tells of Ship to Be Built With 600,000 Horsepower

CROSS ATLANTIC TRAVEL IS GOOD

On his annual inspection tour of the company's agencies west of Montreal, A. Randles, general passenger manager of the Cunard Line for Canada, with headquarters at Montreal, was a visitor in the city over the week-end. He is accompanied by C. A. Whitelock, British Columbia manager for the company. Vancouver, both of whom are having a little time off to indulge in the ancient and honorable game. Mr. Randles said that the Cunard company is enjoying a splendid year's business, in spite of the depression. Cross Atlantic travel eastward has been as good as any year, the company has every experienced, the demand for medium-priced accommodation being greater than ever before, while there has been a slight falling off in first class travel. Westward bound voyages have not been doing so well as formerly, on account of immigration laws being less restricted.

Mr Randles pointed out that the Cunard Line had recently celebrated its ninetieth birthday, and that the company had been started by Samuel Cunard, a native of Halifax, N.S. He stated also that John Brown & Co., shipbuilders, of Clydebank, have been given an order for the construction of a Cunard liner to cost $28,000,000, for express service between the Cunard port and New York. The construction of this great ship will provide employment for a great number of men for several years. The dimensions of the new liner will develop 600,000 horsepower, and the length of the vessel will be 1,000 feet, with accommodation for 4,000 passengers, and she will carry a crew of 800.

ON QUOTING SHAKESPEARE

Sir,—Pie! Pie! my dear R.B.D. How in the name of reason could you quote that line as you cited in your column of Friday, with the ingenious name of Macduff at your set post. There are various readings of the immortal speech of Macbeth, but "be damned to him" does not occur in any I have had the pleasure of reading. Why the "be" and why the "to" in these quotations? I suggest the reading of the most approved text is

"Lay on, Macduff.
And damn'd be him that first cries 'Hold, enough!'"

Any lover of the great poet is pained to hear him misquoted and no one can improve on the accepted diction, but it was a slip, so we will beg you to be more particular in the future.

ROBERT PETER
R.R. 4, Victoria, B.C., July 11, 1930.

THE N.P.A.A.O. REGATTA

Sir,—Before leaving Victoria, I would like to express my critical and personal appreciation of the wonderful support our association has received from The Colonist. Running is a unique sport in that it cannot be commercialized and there is no charge for spectators. It never has and cannot attract the thousands and seat them comfortably, and for that reason has not the appeal that other indoor and outdoor sports have.

Nevertheless, it is a sport of sports, and those who are keen on it are doubly appreciative of the very special recognition their big annual event has received from The Colonist.

O. NELLES STACEY,

AUSTRALIA IS THRILLED OVER RACE IN STORM

In the Teeth of a Tornado, Warship Anzac Battles to Reach Gabo Island Lighthouse

DYING WOMAN SAVED BY SHIP'S SURGEON

MELBOURNE, Aus., July 14.—The exciting race of the Australian warship Anzac, in the teeth of a tornado, to save the life of a lighthouse-keeper's wife, has thrilled Australia.

When word was received that Florence Broderick, gaunt twenty-one-year-old wife of the lighthouse-keeper of Gabo Island, was dying, the Anzac was ordered to sea with a surgeon. After being battered by the storm and swept from end to end by mountainous seas, the warship bore to off the barren island.

Blue jackets rowed the surgeon through the surf to the rocky shore and all that night he remained at the woman's bedside, in the morning he was able to report that the crisis had passed and the patient was out of danger.

A civic board of examination to pass on the proficiency of those applying for plumbing licences and the limitation of what may be done by unlicensed members of the trade are the chief items of dissension, it is understood.

The amendments sought in the proposed draft of the new by-law will be threshed out at a meeting which will be followed by a report to the City Council at its next meeting, July 21.

DEATH RECALLS EARLY HISTORY

George Henry Brown, Who Passed Away Yesterday, Long Associated With Hospital Activities

Early hospital history in Victoria is recalled by the death at the Jubilee Hospital yesterday morning of George Henry Brown, a resident of the city since 1872, and actively interested in institutional care of the sick for the past forty or forty-five years.

A native of North Sydney, Nova Scotia, where he was born on June 11, 1852, Mr. Brown came to Victoria when he was twenty, and in association with his brother, William Brown, opened one of the big grocery stores of the day. Subsequently, following his brother's death from smallpox, he was appointed special western representative for James Pyle & Son, soap manufacturers, a position which he filled for many years. His business activities, however, did not interfere with his activities on behalf of the community. From the beginning he identified himself with movements calculated to promote the welfare of Victoria. Among these activities was the French Benevolent Society, which owned the old Royal Hospital, the successor of the hospital erected in still earlier times on the Indian reserve, and the predecessor of the present Provincial Royal Jubilee Hospital. When the latter opened in 1891 it absorbed the Royal Hospital, but with the proviso that the French Benevolent Society should be represented by three members on its board.

Mr. Brown was one of the first representatives appointed, and had continued in this capacity right up to the time of his death. D. E. Campbell and W. Mable being the other two at the present time. Although seventy-eight years of age and a patient in the Jubilee Hospital since the beginning of February this year, Mr. Brown had maintained his active interest in the hospital's administration, and within a few days of his death, and not more than ten days ago had conferred with colleagues on the hospital board of directors in connection with matters appertaining to the institution.

Mr. Brown was also on the board of the B.C. Protestant Orphanage for some time. Older members of the Pacific Club also remember him as a member. He had held executive positions in the Commercial Travellers' Association.

One daughter, Enid Maude Brown, and one stepson, Edward Frank Burton, survive, also one grandchild; and a sister, Mrs. T. J. Lawlor, of Killarney, Manitoba.

The funeral is to be held at 1 45 o'clock this afternoon from the B.C. Funeral parlors; interment to be in the family plot at Ross Bay Cemetery.

CONSERVATIVE WOMEN HOLD RECEPTION AT METCHOSIN HALL

A very pleasant afternoon was held at Metchosin Hall yesterday, when a meeting for Conservative women of Sooke, Metchosin, Langford and Colwood was held. Occasion was taken to present Mrs. C. H. Dickie to the ladies present, and during the afternoon she was the recipient of a huge bouquet.

The meeting was of an informal character, at which refreshments were served. Tables had been placed about the hall, which was artistically decorated for the occasion. A programme of music, recitations and short speeches by Mr. Dickie, the candidate, and Mrs. Reese Burns, was given.

Mrs. Reese Burns pointed out to the ladies the necessity for their taking a deep interest in politics now that they were charged with the duty of voting. On request Miss Dickie rendered vocal selections.

Broadway Stars pass merciless CLOSE-UP TEST

Like 9 out of 10 screen stars, they have long kept their skin at its best with Lux Toilet Soap . . .

THE moment the talkies "arrived," many of the most famous stars of the Broadway stage were signed by the great motion picture studios. Then, under the glare from the huge incandescent close-up lights, they faced the cruelest test a skin can possibly meet.

Unless their skin showed alluringly smooth and fine on the screen, they could scarcely hope to "get across" in talking and singing pictures.

These Broadway stars passed the test, needless to say. Theirs was the flawlessly smooth skin demanded for the innumerable close-ups of sound pictures. And never were they more appreciative of the gentle care Lux Toilet Soap has given their skin.

For long ago the famous women of the theater made Lux Toilet Soap their own. Long ago it was made the official soap in 71 of the 74 legitimate theaters in New York alone—and in other leading theaters throughout the country.

Hollywood found our years ago that no girl ever becomes a motion picture star unless her skin shows perfect on the screen. That is why, of the 521 important actresses in Hollywood, including all stars, 511 are devoted to Lux Toilet Soap. It keeps the skin lovely and smooth as a flower petal.

It was at the request of the actresses themselves that all the great film studios made this white, delicately fragrant soap official in their dressing rooms.

"People used to say, 'Why, what a Cream baby!' because I cried so often. That made me cry more, especially since I wasn't cross—only unlovely! My skin chafed and it hurt me to dress—till Mother got a nice powder for after my bath. I always liked to bathe, but I big it more now, for the new powder's lovely and soft, and Mother says my skin's just like a flower!"

C. H. Dickie Tells Residents of Marigold He Has Always Advocated Canadian-Made Products

LINDLEY CREASE LAUDS CANDIDATE

C. H. Dickie, Conservative candidate in the Nanaimo riding, opened his campaign activities in the vicinity of Victoria by speaking at a well-attended meeting at the Marigold Hall last night. Lindley Crease, K.C., of this city, also spoke in his support.

The popular candidate took occasion to refer to some of the things that had been secured by him for the riding while he was representing it, and among these he referred to the Esquimalt drydock. Mr. Dickie said that he did not like to make reference to what he had done, but the fact that his opponent was asking what had been accomplished in politics his giving some attention to it. The question asked by Mr. O'Halloran was a legitimate one, but attacks he would not stoop to deal with his personal attacks.

Mr. Dickie said that he did not need to remind the audience of the part he had had in the drydock undertaking. They had all heard Hon. S. F. Tolmie at the recent public express the opinion that the work done by himself (Mr. Dickie) had been of the greatest aid in securing the work.

SUCCESSFUL EFFORTS

There had been a time, after the Conservatives went out of power, when the opposition for years of undertaking became very bitter, and Hon. W. J. Bowser had announced that there would not be any more spent upon it. Mr. Dickie told the electors of the efforts which had been made by Dr. Tolmie and himself to alter the stand taken by the Liberals and the success which is the end attended their efforts.

The obtaining of the appropriation for the C.N.R. branch line from Cowichan Lake to Cowichan Bay, a branch which the company solicitor had informed him in more recent years was the best paying branch of the system, was traced by Mr. Dickie.

As for the statement that he had not rendered help to the Board of Trade of Nanaimo in getting the harbor dredged, this was explained by Mr. Dickie to have been due to the fact that his opponent of that day, Thomas Booth, had neglected to communicate to him the request of the Board of Trade. This had been settled satisfactorily and the following year, when he knew of the requirements, he had succeeded in obtaining the grant required.

Proceeding to the main issues of the election, Mr. Dickie pointed out that ever since he was elected a member of the House of Commons, he had promised the advantages to be derived from the manufacture of raw materials of Canada in Canada, thus keeping the boys and girls at home.

At the risk of repeating himself too often on the matter the candidate instanced the example of the United States in building up of the iron and steel manufacturing business in that country. Instead of importing from Great Britain that country had looked after its own interests, and by protecting the industry had developed it until United States iron and steel came into sharp competition with that of Britain in the markets of the world.

A USEFUL LESSON

From the standpoint of the United States this was a wise policy. It was time that Canada learned the lesson of protecting itself in the matter of deriving the benefits from the raw material, which abounded in this country and established payrolls, which would make for the prosperity of its own people and the paying of good wages within the country.

Touching upon the matter of protecting British Columbia fruit from the invasion of the market by the Americans, Mr. Dickie said that the Liberals had shown that they could not be trusted to give the needed help. The Liberal party was not favorable to protection, and when it attempted to bring into effect antidumping legislation, the results were not a success.

The Economic Conference in September in London, declared Mr. Dickie, should afford the opportunity for a man like Mr. Bennett to negotiate with other parts of the Empire for an advantageous arrangement in a trade-line. The result should be that concessions would be granted which would tend for the building up of trade within the Empire.

WELL-TRIED CANDIDATE

Mr. Crease, in a short address referred to Mr. Dickie as a well-tried candidate. No candidate could be found better able to represent the riding. He had knowledge of the most intimate character of the basic industries within the district.

Mr. Crease referred to Mr. Bennett as an out-and-out Britisher and an out-and-out Canadian of the sturdy generation born in this country. His ancestors had left the United States and come to Canada as United Empire Loyalists rather than in other than under the Union Jack. He advocated the voting for the Conservative party, which would give a real Canadian member in this country.

The position of Premier King was unconscionable one. He announced that there was no unemployment, and he had now promised that he would, in August, call a conference to find a remedy. Mr. Crease said there was an abnormal unemployment condition in the country.

It was a subject which demanded prompt action, which was the method that was being advocated by Mr. Bennett. It was certainly not only to good government but to the best interests of humanity, not to grapple with this matter, he insisted.

DETERMINED ACTION

W. O. Wallace, president of the Saanich Conservative Association, at the close of the meeting made an appeal for determined action in order to give the largest majority possible for Mr. Dickie, a man who never made a promise that he did not keep.

A musical programme was given during the evening with Miss Jackson as accompanist. Mrs. Dickie singing a solo which was encored. At the conclusion of the programme Mrs. F. Cassidy presented Mrs. Dickie with a beautiful bouquet.

The meeting was presided over by H. Holmes.

Ing Aiyan because of the amazing, tomed strain of long distance flying. Mulcahy's endurance was put to the test when he encountered a great mass of rock beside the stream, preventing further progress. It was impossible to go around it since the jungle on all sides was so fearfully thick we knew we'd lose our way, and it was equally impossible to go over it. There it stood and stared at us, and trust to luck to get around the bend.

SWAM TORRENT

"I saw that Moss was much too weak to do this so I made him comfortable as possible, hung some food and water in a safe place and went on alone.

"The stream was a raging torrent, but it was our only hope of life so I jumped in and at last, after a great struggle, reached the other side. I carried on for four more days that day.

"I slept through the night, and the following afternoon, after several hours of cutting through the woods, I heard the welcome bark of dogs. I shouted and attracted the attention of two villagers on the opposite bank. They helped me to the village, where I collapsed and had to remain some time.

"I have no Burmese but I succeeded in making the villagers understand by signs and they seemed to have been left behind. They took me to Myitkyina, partly on foot and partly by boat. Here I met the storekeeper, Po Ket, who spoke English.

SEARCHERS ORGANIZED

"This man and two other villagers went out to make a search for Moss while I, with a guide, went on foot to Malygridon Township, where I met a police subinspector and a party searching for our missing plane. They gave me some food and the police offer to join in the search for Moss.

"I continued my journey to Padaung, which I reached Saturday. The township, which I also took me by boat to Schedeiung, which is nine miles from Prome. I arrived here by motor car.

"Moss had some provisions and I think it very possible that he is still alive and will be rescued."

Matthews is at present being cared for by the Burmese commissioner of Prome, which is 300 miles northeast of Rangoon.

PLANE OVERLOADED

SYDNEY, Australia, July 14.—An explanation that the plane used by Hook and Matthews in their attempt to fly from England to Australia was overloaded is contained in a letter received by the mother of Eric Hook, dated London, June 3.

The Australian airman, who is now lying injured and possibly dying in the Burmese jungle, then wrote: "We will carry enough petrol for ten hours' flying, and we will be overloaded to little but."

He then described to his mother what plans he had made with Jimmie Mathews, his co-pilot, for the start, and added humorously: "We have named our machine 'Spirit,' which interpreted means 'dry as hell,' because both the pilot and his assistant will be on the water wagon until we reach Australia."

Hook's mother is most anxiously awaiting news from the searchers who were dispatched to find her son and Mathews disappeared, lost and exhausted, into Prome, to tell of his companion's plight.

"Today the most heavily armed nation is the least secure nation."—Nicholas Murray Butler.

The wire stated further that there was every indication of a big run, the fish taken being between ten and twelve miles off Uchatest, where the boats had been out five days on the lookout for the coming of the harvest, which was from eight to ten days later than in former years, although the season did not legally open until July 5 this year.

STEWARDS HAVE BEEN SENT HOME

Men Brought Out on Prince Henry Return to England by Order of Immigration Department

RULING WILL APPLY TO STEAMER COMING

VANCOUVER, July 14.—Because the positions could be filled by unemployed men in this city, the crew of twenty-two British waiters were ordered to England last week off the Canadian National S.S. Prince Henry at the orders of the Immigration Department. The ruling of the department was based on the regulations which refuse admission into Canada of contract labor if there is sufficient satisfactory labor available in Canada.

The men who were thus deported were all experienced stewards, practically all veterans of the Great War and all having had years of experience as stewards on ship board. One of them had been twenty years at sea. It was these men who provided the service at the banquet and luncheons which were held on the ship while she was being welcomed at this port on her return to Victoria.

The entire party voiced vigorous protests, claiming that they had been engaged in England under the assurance that they would be given at least two years' employment, but the Immigration Department was adamant, and they had to go back. The same ruling will apply to stewards arriving on Sk. Prince David, if she also is found to carry a crew of stewards, it is said. She will arrive here early in August.

High School Inspector A. Sullivan Tells Grey Coat of Origins of Nation of Today

In an address to the Grey Club yesterday, Albert Sullivan, provincial inspector of high schools, dealt not only with the tangible and visible resources upon which the Canada of today is built, but also with other resources not of a material and ponderable nature but no less real and more dynamic. Principles, character and temperament, carried down and modified or developed from one generation to another, were some of these things. The history of Canada was traced to illustrate this.

Touching upon the diversity and richness of the natural resources of Canada, Mr. Sullivan expressed amazement that people should think of leaving such a land. He closed with an appeal for strict selection of immigration in order that Canada continue to produce a people of the highest type.

W. Hudson presided in the absence of President Frank Burton.

A standing vote of sympathy was expressed with Mr. Burton in the death of George Brown, his stepfather.

Popular Athletes Are Married

The Centennial United Church was the scene of a beautiful wedding last night at 8 o'clock, when Rev. R. Howard performed the marriage of Mary, younger daughter of Mr. J. T. Cockin and the late Mrs. Cockin, 209 Fernwood Road, and Mr. Maurice Bert G. Saville, of Vancouver, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. H Saville, Walnut Street. For the occasion the church had been charmingly decorated with sweet peas in pastel shades, and grasses in silvery and springs. During the service the bride and groom stood beneath a floral arch, and the guest pews had been tied with clusters of silver tree. The bridal marches were played by the organist, Mrs. Ivan Green, and during the signing of the register Mrs. Saunders sang a solo.

At the appointed hour the bride entered the church on the arm of her father, by whom she was given in marriage. She looked radiant in her simple princess gown of white chiffon made with a long skirt, graduating to a train at the back and long sleeves and round neck. With this she wore a veil of French silk net edged with lace, which was terminated with a coronet of orange blossoms. Her only ornament was a string of pearls, and she carried a shower bouquet of pale pink sweet peas while her attendant, Miss Gertrude Fern tied with white tulle. Miss Jean Corkin, sister of the bride, was the only attendant. She looked pretty in a model becoming frock of peach chiffon, with which she wore a hat of Peter Pan lace turned off her face with the brim drooping at the back and trimmed with a large bow of ribbon, and shoes and stockings to match. She carried a bouquet of pelargonium sweet peas and pink roses and wore a necklace of pearls. The best man was Mr. Len Acres, and the ushers were Mr. Henry Corkin, Mr. Douglas Crawford and Mr. Bob Armstrong.

A reception was held at the home of Mrs. E. O. Robathan, 1414 Fernwood Road, who is an old family friend. The house was tastefully arrived into a bower of flowers, masses of spiraea, pink roses and stocks being employed with charming effect.

Mrs. Benwell welcomed the guests on arrival, smartly attired in a robe of navy blue crepe de Chine, with touches of green. The bride and groom stood in the drawing-room beneath a cluster of tiny white wedding bells hung from an arch of gypophila to receive their friends, and were assisted by Mrs. W. T. Bradley, sister of the bride, in a frock of blue green georgette and a pale pink hat. Mrs. Saville, of Mrs. Saville, mother of the groom, in a fawn ensemble of silvery lace and a fawn hat trimmed with blue. Supper was served in the dining room, where the table had been resplendent with a bowl of pink roses and gypophila and lighted with tall pink candles, silver baskets filled with pink candies, and a silver bowl of pink roses and gypophila and lighted with tall pink candles, silver baskets filled with pink candies, and a silver bowl of pink roses strung from the chandelier. The place of honor was held by the three-tier bride cake.

Mr. and Mrs. Saville left at midnight for the Mainland, and will make their home in Vancouver. The bride traveled in a sports suit of white crepe de Chine with a model of frieze silk, over which she wore a tailored coat of navy blue, and a hat of nature mohair.

Among the many beautiful presents received were a mantel clock and a silver cake basket from the staff of the Hudson's Bay Company in Vancouver, where the groom is employed. Both the bride and groom are popular members of sporting circles in Victoria, where the groom formerly lived, and the bride resides. He is now a member of the Hudson's Bay Company's Senior Lacrosse and baseball teams, and the bride is an ice hockey star.

Midsummer Fashions

Details of Coats and Hats Important—Some New Features of Dresses for Day and Evening

At the races the newest fashions express themselves in coats and hats, says an article in The Times (London). A well-shaped coat is Chanel's new falling redingote with a flared hem. Made of black broadcloth, it may be got over a silk or woolen crepe dress, or over chiffon. There may be a collar of shaved lamb, astrakhan, ermine or fox. A white dress with black and white embroidery down the front and a white and black hat go well together. White hats are in the fashion now. Day straw all kinds of straws, dull and shiny, felt, and velvet. A close-fitting skull cap of embroidered velvet is set to the side of the head, mounted on a double line of black and white ribbon and surrounded across the brow.

DETAILS OF DRESS

These very small caps, with or without a bandeau, are the rage. Mostly they are black and white, but they are also blue and red, or grey, brown or amber. The color depends on the dress. Bizen black and white are more fashionable than others, the dominant impression made by any fashionable gathering is black and white, with here and there a splash of color. Brown velveteen has also been worn at the races on dull days. A long brown velveteen coat has a flat collar of a lighter brown and a brown hat, or a brown velveteen dress with a bolero top goes with a lingerie front of butter-colored georgette, and a brown velveteen hat of beret shape. There are many black silk crepe dresses with bolero tops and delicately embroidered lingerie fronts. With them beret shaped hats with velvet bows, or hats with dipping brims and low-fitting crowns. Salmon-looking flowers are worn on coats or bodice, made of chiffon black sheer, with or without buckles or white trimmings are worn, and pullover black gloves of suede or kid. Very light delicate suede gloves are also right. These evenings may be matched with light gloves.

BLACK AND WHITE

At evening parties white dresses and black dresses are the most frequent. Printed chiffons are also worn. Usually, evening dresses are very low on the shoulders behind and high in front. A new neckline has been seen. The neck of a black georgette dress has a soft ruffle of white georgette and the same trimming runs round the armholes. A bow of white georgette hangs from down the front of the bodice. In order the fashion is to have pastel shades or violet blues or gold browns, as in a golden-brown lace dress with deep flounces bordered with chiffon and a chiffon cape round the shoulders. Crepe satin dresses of ivory white, beige-rose, rose green, tearose pink are also seen, and with them go velvet wraps of the same color trimmed with fur. With a black dress, or a white, nothing looks so well as a wrap of black velvet or satin lined with white and trimmed with ermine. For the afternoon dance still wear white and pink organdie dresses, made with full skirts and fitting bodices. Some are embroidered, others have narrow velvet ribbons. Ribbons and Chiffon may trim the organdie.

TENNIS FROCKS

Tennis dresses, always white, are made with the low, not the princess, waistline; they have pleated skirts, fitting slips, straight bodices, no sleeves, and square-cut necks. White bandeaux or visors seem to be preferred. The skirts worn are knife-pleated or box-pleated; all are close fitting at the hips either by the insertion of a yoke or by close stitching into patterns.

U.S. DESTROYERS HOLD RECEPTION

On Sunday evening from 6 to 9 o'clock the officers of the three United States destroyers Southard, Long and Allen held a reception on board the Long, Lieut.-Commander U.S.N. (Lt.-Commander G. L. Dowtes, U.S.N.; Commander D. M. Ashley, U.S.N., and Lt.-Commander R. R. Grey, U.S.N.) being assisted in receiving by the United States Consul and Mrs. G. A. Rankin. About 100 people attended, and sheltered by canvas awnings and decked with flags the decks and cabins of the little warrants presented a very animated appearance as guests moved from one to the other. Supper was served a la buffet, the tables being prettily decorated with flowers, and a programme of fine music enlivened the occasion, which was the last, they, however, were "at home" prior to the destroyers' departure for the naval station at San Diego, California, yesterday morning.

Captain Root, commander of this destroyer division, renewed many friendships which he made during a visit to this port in 1925 to participate in the Dominion Day celebration. On that occasion he brought the destroyer William Jones to Victoria, and had a contingent of blackbirds in the baby drill. Lieutenant-Commander C. Michel, who is the senior staff of Beacon Hill Park Commander Ashley, and Lieutenant-Commander Grey, however, were visiting Victoria for the first time. The three destroyers brought with eighteen young officers, who were received for the first time, but a few weeks' training at sea which is given each year.

Son of the Gods

By REX BEACH

CHAPTER VIII

Pan Yi ascended the dragon when Sam was eleven years old, and he mourned for her as sincerely as his honorable father. The next year Lee Ying moved to New York.

This change was prompted partly by grief and partly in order that the importer might the better attend to his eastern store, which was steadily growing in importance. He at least, Le Ying declared, in reality there was another reason for his going. Sam was growing to look more and more like a son of the Gods. That is to say, he was growing to look less and less like a Chinese boy.

To the father this was confirmation of his belief in the lad's celestial origin, not that confirmation of an implicit belief was necessary, but he heard whisperings that disturbed him, and one day Officer Dunne came to him to considerable distress of mind. The women engaged in Chinatown settlement work—the white women—were asking questions. They were mischievous questions and to them the dignity, the grace of Lee Ying's declining years meant nothing.

Arrived in New York Lee Ying set himself up to even better style than formerly, and the local Chinese welcomed him as if he were a person of national importance. To the Lees it was much like coming from the real China into a land of barbarians, for New York's Chinatown was but a pale counterfeit of the Chinese quarter in San Francisco. Nevertheless, they adapted themselves to it, the curtains of the past fell together behind them, and a new life began.

Lee Ying procured an English tutor for Sam, a bespectacled Cantonese with a bulging, lean-shaped head. The fellow had graduated from Yale, and in his hands Sam's education took a new turn. In a year he had learned to speak a stilted, pedantic sort of book-English and there were few tricks of pronunciation that bothered him. He had learned, also, to wear American clothes, which he did wherever he and his myopic tutor went out into the street. At fourteen he had grown into a sallow, spectacled, owlish youth, crammed to the point of indigestion with a learning far beyond his years.

One day Sam and his tutor were sitting in Mulberry Bend Park, that breathing place tucked in between Chinatown and its environs on the east, and the crowded Italian neighborhood to the west of it. It was a favorite resting place of theirs, for here the tutor boodled while Sam watched the white children at play. Their amusements were rough and meaningless to the boy, the yelling and the quarreling that went with every game struck him as senseless and undignified, nevertheless he felt a timid eagerness to take a hand.

This day he noticed on the bench next to his a little girl, somewhat younger than himself. She was hundled up in more clothes than the weather called for, and from her color it was plain that she had been ill. She possessed an impudent nose and a pair of impudent blue eyes, the which were contracted by a woful mopish. When her glance met Sam's she shyly averted it. This happened two or three times, when the little girl smiled. Sam's lip parted. A moment later he was standing at her side.

"Are you sick, too?" she inquired. Sam shook his head. "I been sick I most died."

"I am sorry," he managed to say. "Wasn't you ever sick?"

"No. I have been remarkably free from disease."

"Well, why don't you play with the other kids? . . . You're Chinese, ain't you? Gee, you don't talk like a Chinaman. . . . I bet it's hard to talk Chinese. . . . We had three doctors at our house and my ma's hair turned grey in a single night. . . . Why don't you play? I'd play if I could, but I can't. Don't you like to play? I do. Only I hate it now."

"My father prefers to have me improve my mind. He says those who avoid him know their studies must learn mental discipline."

"My father never went to school. He's an Assemblyman and he goes to Albany and makes laws. Say, everybody jumps through when he tells 'em to. . . . Gee, it must be funky to be a Chinaman! I'd rather be sick. . . ."

This young person's frankness and impetuosity were embarrassing, but she was a friendly soul and her interest in Sam was unaffected. Her rudeness was unintentional and merely the result of an eager curiosity. Her name was Eileen Cassidy and that was her brother, Jim, yonder. Jim fetched her here every day. They lived down on Oliver Street.

"My pa took me in your store one day. Gee! It's big. You live upstairs, don't you? I live in regular house. . . . I like stores that smell good, like yours. Can you buy anything you want to there? . . . I'm sure you're awful girls. . . ."

When he and his tutor walked home Sam was outwardly sedate, but inwardly he was in upheaval. His notions of white children had entirely altered; there was a strange warm feeling in his breast. He had a friend.

Eileen' brother Jim was a healthy, harum-scarum boy, and he resented playing the effeminate role of mamemaid, as in the days that followed he more than willingly surrendered the care of his sister to Sam Lee and proceeded to amuse himself. Daily Sam brought presents to his little friend, and in consequence his status with the other children changed. They began to regard him with something beyond contempt. Seeing in him a source of possible revenue, they assumed a demeanor wholly artificial—it was an experience, by the way, with which he was destined to become all too familiar as time went on.

Eileen Cassidy proved one day that she, at least, was a stout and loyal friend. On this occasion Sam had brought her not ivory, nor agate, nor silk as usual, but his own most cherished possession, his fighting crickets. There were three of them, each housed in a gourd elaborately carved and colored to resemble a blossoming flower and provided with a perforated ivory cover highly decorated.

The crickets, he explained, were not ordinary insects; they were the reincarnation of famous warriors long dead and they bore honorable Chinese names, the which Eileen did not undertake to repeat. At such they received the most delicate attentions; they were fed and watered from tiny porcelain dishes and a little bed was provided for each. They were specially bred and trained champions with records of many victories. Eileen was told, and their food consisted of rice, lettuce, then she brushed the tousled and pinned up the rents in them. Not once did she call him a Chink, nor indicate in any way that he was in the least different from other boys.

"You are too kind," Sam said in a quavering voice. "I have never had fore engaged in a fight. The lowest order of cricket victious, the higher type of man is firm, but not quarrelsome."

"D'you hear that, Eileen? There's sense to the boy. And the nice English he uses. Yes, and you picking up nothing but slang and vulgarity off the streets."

There was a lump in the boy's throat as he walked home. Mrs. Cassidy had the same tender touch as little old Pan Yi, of blessed memory, and there was the same comfort in her robust voice as in the bird-like cooing of Sam's Chinese mother. He wondered why he had felt like crying when she thrust while woman's firm and capable hands touched his flesh. Why had he yearned so desperately to feel her sheltering arms around his body? Other Chinese children shrank from contact with people of white skins, but he liked it. He had the queer feeling that Mrs. Cassidy and Eileen were flesh and blood with him.

On the next Sunday afternoon Lee Ying and Lee Sam, each clad in his finest native dress, called at the Cassidy home. The entire family was there, and the old merchant bowed deeply in turn to the Assemblyman, to his wife, to Jim and to little Eileen. He raised his clasped hands to the level of his forehead and lowered them repeatedly. Sam did likewise. Then Lee Ying made a graceful speech of thanks for the courtesy his son had received.

To Mrs. Cassidy he said: "Sam brings you an unworthy remembrance of his gratitude for your kindness, and I beg that you will accept it." As he spoke he unwrapped a package the boy had carried, exposing a beautiful porcelain vase of delicate and unusual colouring.

Mrs. Cassidy admired it. She thought it would look well on the plush-draped mantel between the marble clock and the gilt easel, with the photograph of Dan Cassidy in his silk hat and frock coat of coffee. The good woman was unaware that she held in her careless hand a relic of a famous dynasty which would have drawn a crowd in any museum, but she was frank to say it was pretty.

That was the beginning of a sincere friendship between the Cassidys and the Lees, a friendship that had endured for seven years. Eileen was a young woman now, and she was attending business college. Jim had a position with a trucking firm.

Eileen's friends sometimes twitted her about her Mott Street boy friend, and although she was ready to joke on most subjects, here was one to which she could see no humor. Once, when her brother lauded her too persistently and called Sam Lee Chinese sweetheart, she flew into a rage and scratched his face.

was flung down and his clothes were torn. His nose was bleeding; he heard yells of:

"Soak the Chinaman!" . . . "Wallop the dirty Chink!" . . . "Lemme get at 'im."

Eileen was in the very middle of the fray—she had by now fully recovered her strength—biting, scratching, kicking, striking.

"I'll kill you," she screamed. "You hurt him and I'll scratch your eyes out. . . . Let him go. . . . I'll tell my pa."

Dan Cassidy was known and feared, but gang spirit was proof against more than the mere threat of his anger. On a fellow standing by her neck Eileen wore her father's old police whistle, and this at last she blew with all her breath. Now in the neighborhood of The Five Points police whistles are not sounded in idleness. Having pretty well disposed of Sam, his assailants were becoming frightened at the extent of the havoc they had created, so they separated and scurried away, each to his own direction. They left Eileen standing on her feet, shaking her fists and shrieking threats of vengeance after them.

Sam was a sight. He was skinned and bruised and bloody; his nose pained him terribly. If did not feel like a nose at all; it was much larger than a nose, and so did it feel. There was the taste of blood in his mouth. . . . No doubt he would bleed to death in a very short time. That appalling spot concerned him less, however, than the amazing phenomena which had occurred inside of him. He had been reared in the dignity and the repose that is Chinese; he had been taught to abhor violence; he had been made to believe that peace is perfection and tranquility is paradise. What strange and terrifying monster was this that had taken possession of him, soul and body? It rocked and swayed him, it flushed his mind to madness. His hurts were pleasant and he took a savage, drunken joy in them. And his mighty warriors, those honorable heroes of a hundred battles, corpses now! Crushed under the heels of barbarians! He stamped and tried to stamp the shattered bits of gourd shell, and lovely, and porcelain. He wept for the three brave spirits that were gone.

Eileen was crying, too. She was plucking at him and talking gently. She was crying, not for the crickets, but for him.

"Mercy me! What have you been up to now, and who's this with you?" Mrs. Cassidy inquired a few minutes later when her daughter came wailing into the house, bringing Sam by the hand.

Eileen told what happened. Choking, sobbing, she gasped out the horrid story, and meanwhile Sam tried to comfort her.

But this was a house of understanding and of sympathy. Mrs. Cassidy neither condemned him nor made light of the tragedy; on the contrary, she praised his spirit and voiced indignation at the outrage. She made a lot over Sam in a motherly way. To begin with, she took him into the bathroom and washed his face and hands and applied strange smelling salves and liniments upon his cuts and bruises, then she brushed his clothes and pinned up the rents in them. Not once did she call him a Chink, nor indicate in any way that he was in the least different from other boys.

"You are too kind," Sam said in a quavering voice. "I have never had fore engaged in a fight. The lowest order of cricket victious, the higher type of man is firm, but not quarrelsome."

Robins Have Ace in Babe Herman

By AL DEMAREE
(Former Pitcher New York Giants)

The astounding success of the Brooklyn Robins this year has all the baseball experts crowed up. Picked by the so-called wise guys to finish no higher than sixth place, they have crossed everybody and have shown everything in both offence and defense.

Two of the big factors in the success of the Dodgers are Babe Herman and Del Bissonette. Both are sluggers and hit for extra bases and are the type of hitters who can win games by clouting the ball out of the park with men on the bases.

"I would just as soon hit a single if I won't get a home run," Babe Ruth often remarks when he gets a double or triple. And not in the National League, Babe Herman, at the same tempo, hits.

Herman has plenty of color and is a left-handed hitter of terrific power. Many think he will be the Babe Ruth's successor. Both began as pitchers, played first base for the Sox and then went to the outfield.

Ruth's legs will not stand many more campaigns, while Herman is a comparative youngster. Last year he hit 43 doubles, 13 triples, and 31 home runs. Not a bad year's work for the National League Babe.

CANADIAN SWIM MARK SHATTERED

Eleanor Holm Betters 300 - Yard Record at Lake Louise by Over Eight Seconds

CHATEAU LAKE LOUISE, Alta., July 14.—Eleanor Holm, of New York, today unofficially broke the Canadian record of 3 minutes 20 seconds by doing the 220 yards backstroke style in 8 minutes 11 4-5 seconds.

Beneath the mighty glacier-capped peaks that surround Lake Louise, seven fair daughters of Uncle Sam today exhibited their aquatic talents, each event being acclaimed with well-merited applause from the large number of spectators who lined the galleries above the glass-walled pool as one swimming pool of the Lake Louise Chateau.

Georgia Coleman, the diving star of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, United States champion diver, member of the 1928 Olympic team and the only one of the galaxy of stars who is not from New York, gave an exhibition of diving that left the onlookers breathless with wonder.

Through the whole category of known dives she star went, without pause during the morning and afternoon exhibitions. Eleanor Holm also of the 1928 Olympic team, gave a remarkable and speedy exhibition of backstroke swimming. Constance Hanf, the twelve-year-old junior free style champion and 100 yards junior Metropolitan free style champion, staged some spirited contests with older members of the party, that made her a great favorite here. Agnes Geraghty electrified the crowd with her breaststroke swimming in the 100 yards doing it in 1 minute 25 seconds. Lisa Lindstrom, Metropolitan district champion, competed against Catherine Ames, famous relay team swimmer, both finishing the 300 yards in 3 minutes 37 seconds.

JACK NASH WINS ONTARIO AMATEUR FROM DON CARRICK

TORONTO, Ont., July 14—An eighteen-year-old youth, a thinker rather than a hitter, won the Ontario amateur golf title. The youthful champion is Jack Nash, of the London Hunt Club, who, on Saturday, defeated Don Carrick of Toronto, former provincial and Canadian amateur title holder, in the eighteen-hole final over the exacting Scarboro links. He won by a narrow margin of 4 and 3.

He avenged the defeat of his chum-mate, Ross "Sandy" Somerville the three-time holder who was eliminated in the first round of the tournament.

Favorites Advance in City Clay Court Tennis Tourney

Select Players Disposed of Opposition in One-Sided Manner in Yesterday's Play at Kingston Street Lawn Tennis Club

Favorites continued to advance yesterday in the play for the City Clay Court Tennis Championships at the Kingston Street Club. Great progress was made in no less than twenty-one matches being decided. The committee in charge states that the schedule is being speeded up that all semi-finals will be played off by Friday evening, leaving Saturday afternoon for the finals. Play is very one-sided some of the younger players are showing such good form that some upsets may be witnessed before the meet is finished.

Yesterday's play in the men's singles saw all the preliminary matches decided, except one which will be played between the eight seeded players all came through with comfortable easy wins. Two reshuffles in this event went to three sets, Cecil Bird and Ralph Rogers in a strenuous battle, which the former won, and Roland Perrin and Walter Crossley fought hard and evenly for three sets before the former gained the decision.

In the men's doubles two of the favored teams were in action and advanced to the next round without serious opposition. There were Weinstein and Rayment disposed of Cecil Bird and Campbell Fraser, and Ronnie Kirkbride and Paul Phillips eliminated Perrin and Prentice. The other match played in this event was a keenly contested three-set affair, which Parker and Martin won from D. Bird and I. Phillips. Today Hocking and Cunningham will play Jones and Schwengers and a spectacular match is looked for.

MONA MILLER EXTENDED

The feature of yesterday's play in the women's singles was the plucky stand which Mrs. W. Parker made against Miss Mona Miller. She went after everything and stuck close to her game, making her more experienced opponent extend herself to the utmost to win by scores of 6-3, 10-8. Another well contested match in this event was the match between Miss Kilshin and Miss Beete Richards both, both of whom gave everything they had for three sets, Miss Kitchin finally winning out.

One of the closest matches of the day was that between Miss Hughes, women's doubles winner, Mrs. Unsworth and Mrs. T. H. Leeming defeated Mrs. Baird and Mrs. C. Jones 7-5, 3-6, 7-5. Miss Hughes and Miss Stuggett in a match in which the play was closer than the scores would lead one to believe.

BIG SCHEDULE TODAY

Twenty-two matches are scheduled for this afternoon commencing at 3 o'clock. As the tournament progresses and the weaker players are gradually weeded out, play is getting closer and harder, and followers of the tournament are looking for all kinds of thrills before the different titles are captured on Saturday afternoon.

Irving Wagner, well-known player from Seattle, has shown great form in the early round matches, and is expected to make the local racquet welders go the limit to keep the title at home. He is a very colorful as well as an effective player, and should provide many thrills for the large numbers of spectators who are expected to turn out to see him perform.

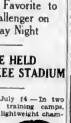
MANDELL TO MEET SINGER IN TITLE GO

Lightweight Champion Is Six-to-Five Favorite to Whip Challenger on Thursday Night

BOUT TO BE HELD AT YANKEE STADIUM

NEW YORK, July 14—In two widely separated training camps, Sammy Mandell, lightweight champion, and Young Al. Singer, his challenger, today wound up training for their fifteen-round title bout at Yankee Stadium Thursday night.

Mandell, the veteran, has done the least work in preparation for what promises to be one of the biggest receipts of his long career.



SAMMY MANDELL

Singer has plunged along in feverish fashion, a youngster gaining daily in ability, without the least sign of bugaboo that has hung over Mandell for two years.

Mandell is a 6 to 5 favorite with the prospect he will enter the ring at no better than even money.

HERMAN MOVES UP IN BIG SIX RACE

Brooklyn Swatsmith Raises Batting Mark to .356 to Go Into Second Place Tie

Babe Herman, hard-hitting Brooklyn, took the lead in the race for the National League yesterday to advance into a tie for second place with Chuck Klein in baseball's Big Six. Bob Kirin and O'Doul, the leader, were idle while Herman pounded out two hits to advance his bat to tack one point onto his batting average, which now stands at .356 an average of .356.

The American League half of the sesteta were in action, but Simmons, one of the leaders, and Lou Rice failed to move up or down. Simmons lost one hit against St. Louis pitching and lost four points, falling to .355. Rice got a home run, one hit in a double-header and dropped from .374 to .367. Rice's two safeties in five times at bat left his average unchanged.

PARIS, July 14—The first prospect that Bill Tilden would resume under his decision and play with the American Davis Cup team vanished today, when the veteran maintained his previous decision, and told the Associated Press he was positively disinclined to play in Paris.

It was definitely announced the American team would be composed of the four youthful stars, Wilmer Allison, Johnny Doeg, John Van Ryn and George Lott, Jr.

The actual line-up for the intersectional final matches with Japan this week-end will be announced at the drawing. Thursday.

England Scores 242 Runs for 5 Wickets Against Australia

Rain and Bad Light Interfere With Cricket Test at Leeds—Draw Looming as Match Will Come to End Today

(Canadian Press)

LEEDS, England, July 14—England now has the brightest chance of saving the third cricket test match against Australia. Rain today prevented play until 2.30 p.m., and bad light cut it short at 6.30 p.m. In that short time England improved their position, raising their first innings score from 312 for five wickets to 242 without losing a man. The danger of a single innings defeat of Australia winning on a second innings seems to have been eliminated and England can expect a draw. Australia scored 566 in their first innings, and, of course, cannot be beaten as the match must end tomorrow.

Wally Hammond and George Duckworth continued their innings today on a wicket which was soft, and from which the bowlers took wickets at almost every ball. They stuck to their guns and when play ceased Duckworth had given a fine demonstration of sensational, while Hammond began to play in fine form before gathering darkness stopped play. The two batsmen took England through a critical period, and nothing but a staggering collapse by their batsmen tomorrow can give Australia a victory.

A handful of people sat throughout the day confident there would be cricket, and they were rewarded. They passed the time balding the umpires every time they went to inspect the wicket, and in singing songs which were appropriate to the conditions.

The heavy rain was falling tonight and prospects were not good for playing weather tomorrow.

JOKERS CAPTURE FIRST OF SERIES

Defeat Moore & Whittington, 11-5, in Opening Play-Off for Westbourne Softball League Title

Jokers, first half champions, took a stranglehold on the Westbourne Softball League championship last night at the Victoria West Park, when they scored an 11-5 victory over Moore-Whittington, second half winners, in the first of a two-game series for the title. Bailles in the fourth and seventh innings gave the winners their margin of victory.

Playing faultless ball behind the fine pitching of Lloyd Sowerby, the Jokers shut out their opponents in the first of the nine innings. The Westbourne men were leading 1-0 up to the fourth frame when the winners took a 3-hug to the offerings of Eddie Thomas and Lloyd Sowerby before being halted. In this stanza Roy Bacon, first sacker for Moore-Whittington, had the misfortune to break a finger and retired from play.

Continuing their heavy hitting, the Jokers scored two more in the fifth and added four more in the seventh. The losers tallied one in the first frame and checked home with their last two runs in the ninth when Ivan Beemer smashed out a homer in the fifth, while Younson and Banks connected for three-baggers.

The second game will be played Thursday evening at the Victoria West Park, at 6 ek o'clock, with Pasque and Brown, Griffiths and umpires. The winners of this series will play off with the City League champs for the city championship.

EAGLES HAND ELKS' BALLTOSSERS SETBACK

Tribe Springs Big Upset by Defeating Antlered Crew, 12-7

Results Places Sons of Canada Out in Front in Pennant Race—Elks Turn In Worst Performance of Season

HOW THEY STAND

Next game tomorrow: Sons of Canada vs. Eagles.

Eagles, lowly occupants of the cellar position in the Senior Amateur Baseball League pennant race, figured in the season's upset last night at the Royal Athletic Park, when they toppled the Elks under a 12-7 score. It marked the third victory of the season for the feathered tribe, who have been successful in snabbing each of the clubs once. Although there were plenty of hobbies, the fans went away satisfied that they had seen an interesting tussle. The more fact that the cellar occupants arose to the occasion and took a game from the top team, was sufficient to warrant their attendance. The results place the Sons of Canada out in front in the pennant race.

A BRIEF DEBUT

Charlie Burr, fiery thatched twirler, made his debut on the hillock for the Elks. However, he found the going much to his dislking, and before he had a chance to get settled, he was yanked in favor of Wade Steele, veteran hurler. Steele took the mound with six runs home and two men on, but halted the parade as soon as he stepped in. Four four innings Steele managed to hold the tribe in check, but in the seventh and eighth sessions the Eagles got to his offerings again and checked in with another half a dozen markers.

Bill Holmes, youthful club artist, went to the mound for the Eagles. Holmes allowed fifteen bingles, but he kept them so far scattered that the antlered crew found difficulty in making them count for runs.

Elks scored two in the first, two in the third and one in each of the fourth and fifth innings to tie the feathered tribe. However, this was as close as they ever came, in the ninth when they needed six markers to tie the score they checked in with one.

Jack Morgan, covering the hot corner for the Elks, slouted his eighth circuit smash of the season and increased his lead over Bill Holmes to four.

Wade Steele led the hitters, getting three safeties out of five trips to the plate.

LOCAL RUGGERS BEAT DAUNTLESS

Ellis' Try and Campbell Forbes' Kick Gives Victoria Fifteen Victory Over Tars, 6-3

Displaying a fine brand of Rugby despite the warm weather and ground conditions, a picked fifteen from local clubs scored a 3-0 victory over a squad from H.M.S. Dauntless last evening at the Cadets grounds, before a good crowd of spectators. The squad played twenty-five minutes each way and showed good form considering that the season is still far away.

Ellis, one of Victoria's fleet-footed forwards, crashed through the visitors' back division about halfway through the last period to score the lone, and what proved to be the winning, try of the game. Campbell Forbes, a member of the local "rep" fifteen last season, added the extra points with a beautiful kick. During the remainder of the game the Victoria squad continually pressed but failed to add to their total. Commander Murray refereed.

Victoria Cricketers Draw With Vancouver

Heavy Scoring Marks B.C. Fixture—Darcus Scores 104 and Eric Quainton 80 for Locals—Up-Island Team Defeated

VANCOUVER, July 14.—Phenomenal scoring by Vancouver and Victoria featured the opening games at Brockton Point today, in the British Columbia cricket tourney, and as a result the game was left drawn with chances even. The game between Burnaby and an eleven from the Wednesday League was also drawn in favor of the Wednesday League team. In the third game Vancouver Cities defeated the Upper Island eleven by 65 runs.

Winning the toss Victoria batted first, but lost two wickets for 41 when Darcus joined Eric Quainton and these two collared the bowling by adding exactly 100 runs when the latter was bowled for 80. Darcus continued to pile up runs and after three other wickets fell cheaply, Percy Allen helped him to add another 89 for the seventh wicket, when Darcus was caught for a brilliant 104. With 278 for eight wickets Victoria declared.

Vancouver was a beaten team until Bob Quinn partnered Scott. These gave the greatest exhibition of batting seen on a local ground in many years and carried the score from 127 for seven to 206 for eight, when Quinn was bowled after making a sensational even 100 in forty-five minutes, while Scott carried his bat for eighty-five.

The Upper Islanders lost their opening game to a strong team of Olbs by 65 runs. Idirna was the star of the Islanders, batting with a patient 61, but apart from Neil with 21 the remainder gave him little help, and they were all out for 133, the Olbs scoring 218.

MERCUR GIVEN HARD BATTLE

St. Louis Youth Forces Sixth T-S Ranking Stars to Two Decard Sets in Clay Court Tourney

KANSAS CITY, July 14.—No dark horses appeared today in the opening of play for the 1930 national clay court tennis championship, and pairings for the second round singles tomorrow found all seeded players in competition.

Completion of the first round left the forecast of a possible champion no easier for those who prognosticate on form, ranking and records.

Those who favored Fritz Mercur, Harrisburg, Penn., were less sure of their choice after Karl Hodge, St. Louis, forced the number six national ranking star and co-holder of the tournament doubles title to two deuced sets, before Mercur seeded No. 1, won, 7-5, 8-7.

The lanky Frank Shields, New York, did not show as expected against Teddy Eggman, St. Louis, whom he defeated, 6-4, 0-6, 6-4, in preliminary, but appeared in fine fettle later when he eliminated Elsie Klingman, Chicago, in a first round tussle, 8-2, 6-4.

Wilmer F. Coen, Jr., Kansas City, seeded No. 2, defeated G. Street, Independence, Kas., and gained many more backers than already were pulling for a national title for the boy star, who has played much in Europe.

Fast Yacht Authors Has Changed Hands

Fleet Captain J. F. Dick, of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, has sold his smart racing and cruising sloop Authors to Eric Peel, who lately arrived in this city. Authors has done exceptionally well in the races for her class this year, having captured the Virtue Cup, the Cowichan Cup and the Pacific Northwest perpetual challenge trophy. Mr. and Mrs. Dick will leave for a cruise in England next month, but Mr. Dick told The Colonist yesterday that he hoped to buy another boat for next season's racing upon his return.

PRINCESS SOPHIE IN LONDON

After terrifying experiences in a Bolshevik prison, Princess Sophie Lieven has arrived in London, after paying the Soviet Government 230 rubles for a passport. She is a sister-in-law of Sir Kirnston Mudie, former Lord Mayor of London. The Princess will move to the home in Russia again as long as the present Communist regime endures. While hatred, and with her face showing signs of her persecution, the Princess refused to discuss her life in Russia, saying she had seen the tragic results of Cheka (secret police) persecution, and she was afraid unwittingly to harm persons remaining in Russia. She said she felt as happy as a schoolgirl at leaving Russia, as her greatest thrill had been shopping in Riga, Latvia, after leaving Russia, and trying to realize how anybody could freely purchase everything without standing in queues for hours and presenting identification and ration cards.

Canadian Marksman Makes Perfect Score At 900-Yard Range

Sergeant Foam Captures Duke of Cambridge Service Rifle Shoot After Brilliant Display—Local Shots Show Good Form

(Canadian Press)

BISLEY CAMP, Eng., July 14.—Giving a brilliant exhibition of perfect marksmanship, Sergeant C. W. Foam, of the Black Watch, Montreal, Montreal, today won the Duke of Cambridge service rifle shoot. He thus answered the first important individual prize to fall to a Canadian during the present meeting of the National Rifle Association. Foam had a perfect score to defeat hundreds of other marksmen. The match was fired at the comparatively long range of 900 yards with service rifles, and weather conditions were not perfect. He never faltered, however, carefully aiming ten perfectly placed shots into the bull's eye at this distance of than a half a mile in front of him.

Another Canadian, Captain J. E. Foreman, of Hamilton, with 48, was fourth in this shoot. Second and third places went to Captain Wakefield, of the Royal Artillery, and Sergeant Black, of the Royal Marines.

Enthused over Foam's victory, and bolstered by the uniformly good showing of the Canadian marksmen, and The Daily Telegraph, the Canadian contingent was excellent in night of retaining the much-prized Rodmore Cup tomorrow. Eight Canadians will be picked to defend this trophy, which first offered by the Duke of Kolapore in 1871, and since then captured by other teams from the Empire. Canada decisively won it last year from the Mother Country. The Canadians will have to meet the onslaught of teams from the Motherland, India and other parts of the Empire.

HEAVY RAINSTORM

A rainstorm of torrential proportions fell over the range today during shooting for The Daily Telegraph Silver Cup. Marksmen fired seven shots at the 600-yard range with service rifles, and the leading Canadians were Lieut. A. C. Carter, of Toronto, and Sergt. C. W. Foam, of Montreal, with 33 out of a possible 35.

Among other Canadian scores were Lieut. J. Bewen, Edmonton, 32; Sergt. J. V. Adamson, Kenaston, Sask., 32; Sergt. J. M. Regan, Victoria, 32; Sergt.-Major W. H. Ruffell, Victoria, 31; Capt. W. O. Holland, Victoria, 30.

The Clements Smith Memorial Aggregate for 300 scores to Pvtds.? Conan Doyle and Donegal service rifle shoot, was won by Sergt. A. C. Fulton, former King's Prize winner. Best Canadians were Lieutenant Bowen, of Edmonton, tenth, and Company Sergeant - Major Emslie, of Toronto, fourteenth, each winning £5.

The Conan Doyle Statuette went to A. V. Grraves, London Rifle Club Company. Sergeant-Major Emslie was highest Canadian, placing ninth, to win $10. The Donegal match shoot-off resulted in a tie between Lieut. G. Booth, formerly of the Royal Canadian Regt., and F. Remnant, of London Rifle Club.

NAVY MAN IN FRONT

Parke, of the navy, won the Black Exchange Aggregate, for best total scores in yesterday's three long shoots. Lieut. Desmond Burke, who amassed 100 out of a possible 105 for the three events, finished eighth in the aggregate, winning £15. The National Rifle Association Journal Prize went to Parke, of the navy. Lieut. Desmond Burke placed sixth and Lieutenant Bowen seventieth.

The Daily Mail shoot finished with four marksmen having perfect scores of 30, and they will shoot off for the prize on Tuesday. The best Canadian scores in this shoot were 24's, marked up by Capt. J. P. Foreman, of Hamilton; Company Sergt.-Major H. A. Timbrell, of Toronto, and Company Sergt.-Major O. M. Emslie, of Toronto.

The Wimbledon shoot saw three marksmen with perfect scores of 35. Lieut. Desmond Burke, of Ottawa, former King's Prize winner, was best Canadian in this event, scoring 34 and placing ninth. Sergt. J. H. Hayes, Victoria, made 31, and Sergt.-Major W. H. Ruffell, Victoria, 29.

Besides keeping a jealous eye on the Kelapore Trophy, the Canadians are hoping The Times Silver Trophy will come their way tomorrow. Four Canadians are among the seventeen mark men who are to shoot off for this trophy. The seventeen all had perfect scores in the match on Saturday and the four Canadians are Lieut. J. Bowen, of Edmonton; Lieut. A. C. Carter, of Toronto; Lieut. J. M. Dow, of Saint John, and C.S.M. W. G. Holland, of Victoria.

SKINNER GOES WILL

Canadian lacrosse also took pride today in the achievement of Lieut. A. E. Skinner, formerly of Fort William. Lieutenant Skinner was one of the three marksmen with Wakefield, of the Royal Artillery, and Sergeant Black, of the Royal Marines.

Enthused over Foam's victory, and bolstered by the uniformly good showing of the Canadian marksmen, and The Daily Telegraph, the Canadian contingent was excellent in night of retaining the much-prized Rodmore Cup tomorrow. Among other Canadian scores were Lieut. J. Bewen, Edmonton, 32; Sergt. J. V. Adamson, Kenaston, Sask., 32; Sergt. J. M. Regan, Victoria, 32; Sergt.-Major W. H. Ruffell, Victoria, 31; Capt. W. O. Holland, Victoria, 30.

By ROL METZGER

According to Tommy Armour, it's pretty nearly a waste of time to follow Bobby Jones and other stars in Interclubs today, or anywhere. We haven't the wrists to play golf as he does. After writing words to that effect, Tommy proceeds to explain how he plays the irons. But how can we play them like Tommy, once you have seen his hands?

I imagine Jones is rather a good example to pattern after in spite of all Tommy had written. We can at least obtain the principles involved from studying his game. They can't be far from right. One is Bobby's way of playing the ball.

For all normal shots, the Helen Hicks (or is Helen like Bobby?) stands with it opposite the middle of his left foot. So it must be possible, as Miss Hicks has also discovered, to get step on an iron with the ball in this position. You merely cut the legs out from under it. Bobby has another good idea, too, that will be taken up tomorrow.

At The Playhouses

ROMANTIC ERRORS ARE REPEATED

"Strictly Unconventional" at Capitol Theatre, Proves Full of Amusing Situations

In "Strictly Unconventional" which opened last night at the Capitol Theatre, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have made a clever and vastly entertaining talkie version of W. Somerset Maugham's stage hit, "The Circle," which will be remembered as the co-starring vehicle of the late John Drew and Mrs. Leslie Carter.

What stands out in this native of married life, exclusive of its amusing drawing-room situations and brilliant dialogue, are the various characterizations handled with telling deftness by Lewis Stone, Ernest Torrence, Mary Forbes and Alison Skipworth in the roles of the older generation whose matrimonial blunders do not prevent their sons and daughters from committing the same romantic mistakes.

COLUMBIA Olive Borden, dark-haired and demure portrays the heroine in Reta Lambert's Deliverator story, "Hello Sister," the all-dialogue feature attraction at the Columbia Theatre today and tomorrow. The story of "Hello Sister" revolves around an heiress who, to participate in her rich grandfather's will, must eschew all modern beauty aids and disguise herself as a young lady of the mauve decade.

COLISEUM Conrad Nagel, screen hero, and Linda Watanabin, noted villain, stage one of the most sensational screen fights in years in "The Ship From Shanghai," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's talking drama of the sea now playing at the Coliseum Theatre. Charles Brabin directed the new play, a filmization of Dale Collins' novel, "Ordeal."

PLAYHOUSE Walter Catlett, Sue Carol and Earl Stuart have the leading roles in "Why Leave Home?" the Fox Movietone musical comedy version of the noted stage mirth-maker, "The Cradle Snatchers." Catlett, who wrote the dialogue for the film, exacts the role of one of the husbands, with Miss Carol and Stuart handling the parents in "Why Leave Home?" is now showing at the Playhouse Theatre.

POPULAR STAR IN EMOTIONAL ROLE

Norma Shearer Makes Big Hit in "The Divorcee," Showing at Dominion

Norma Shearer's ability as an actress capable of handling difficult emotional roles is again vividly demonstrated in her newest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer talking vehicle, "The Divorcee," which opened last night at the Dominion Theatre.

In this picture adapted from a story by Ursula Parrott, the attractive star plays the part of a woman whose attempts at showing her husband that there is a double standard for women as well as men result in utter disaster. According to the reception given "The Divorcee" at last night's opening at the Dominion Miss Shearer has made no mistake in going back to her sophisticated characterizations for which her calm assurance, immaculate beauty and mature acting have pre-eminently fitted her.

FRANCE HOLDS GREAT REVIEW

Imposing Parade Through Streets of Paris Recalls Post-War Military Glory and Strength

MANY VISITORS SEE TROOPS ON MARCH

PARIS, July 14—France's postwar military glory and strength today were visualized for the world in an imposing review and parade through the streets of the capital on the 15th anniversary of the Fall of the Bastile.

Troops wearing the costumes of the days when the French conquered Algeria, 100 years ago, and in all the uniforms of the many campaigns since, marched past President Doumergue, the Ministers of War, the navy and air department and military attaches of all countries of the world. Most of the ambassadors were in the presidential stand. Among them was the Japanese Imperial Prince Takamatsu.

Overhead six squadrons of pursuit planes droned in arrowhead formation, while brilliantly-uniformed envoys and military figures in automobiles, escorted by Republican guards, moved in panorama before units representing the present day arms of France in the great open space before the Invalides which Napoleon erected.

In the reviewing stand, near the Champs Elysees, the presidential party watched the greatest parade of troops of all arms since France won after the World War, when danced the long famous military review at Longchamps.

COLORFUL PARADE

Grey army tanks, infantry, cavalry, engineers and naval and military cadets and marines were in the line, their modern trappings contrasting strongly with the stage-like uniforms of the Algerian conquerors of a century ago, conspicuous in their tall hoodless. After the Algerians came engineers in leather caps, executive units in cocked hats, looking as if they had walked out of ancient picture books.

Those oddly assorted and picturesque divisions maneuvered upon the wide avenues, while bands played Rossini's "Moses." The Zouaves, with their immense baggy trousers, singing in unison their old war songs, formed an interesting group. Finally there appeared, in a flashing mass of white, two score of Arab chiefs from the Sahara desert, mounted on steeds they had brought with them for this march. They were tall, dark warriors, symbolizing a branch of France's distant army, numbering many divisions.

Hundreds of thousands of citizens and visitors lined the route from the Invalides past the Madeleine to the City Hall, where the parade ended and the troops scattered.

BOYS START ON WEEK'S VACATION

Religious Education Society's Group Takes Turn In Maple Lawn Camp at Sooke

A large group of boys of the Religious Education Society commenced a week's vacation at Maple Lawn Camp, Sooke, on Saturday last, when over twenty girls of the Canadian Girls in Training vacated camp, after spending the past week there.

During the holiday a regular programme of morning worship, Bible study periods, chores, tent inspection, discussion, swimming and games, etc., was prepared for the C.G.I.T. under the direction of Miss Lee, the camp nurse, who gave daily instruction in nursing; Mrs. Taylor, of Nanaimo, sports director; Miss Tina MacGrimmon, swimming director, and Miss G. W. Beall, camp director.

Various other activities were participated in; one afternoon the girls hiked to Sunshine Camp, where they were kindly shown around the place; a visit was made to Mrs. Campbell, who showed them his collection of crystals and semi-precious stones collected from around Sooke Harbor. This visit was followed by a wiener roast on Mr. Campbell's beach.

On visitors' day, which was Saturday, a programme of field events was run off under the direction of Mrs. Taylor.

Next week after the boys' time expires, another camp for senior girls, aged from fifteen to seventeen years, will be formed under the direction of Miss Margaret Johnson, of Vancouver. This camp goes from July 29 to 31. As accommodation is limited and quite a number of registrations are in already from Vancouver and elsewhere, all girls wishing to partake in this camp are asked to register immediately with Miss Bradshaw, of the Y.W.C.A.

NANAIMO SWEPT BY HEAVY STORM

Automobile Scorched and Residents Arm Blackened by Saturday's Lightning

NANAIMO, July 14—After a sultry day of enervating heat, one of the heaviest thunderstorms in recent years suddenly burst over the city at about 8:30 Saturday night.

Although no serious damage was done, an automobile belonging to W. Hart was scorched; while one citizen, who was disconnecting the aerial of his radio, having the wire end in one hand and the other hand on the ground pipe, had his arm slightly blackened.

Several ladies who were just finishing their week-end shopping were considerably alarmed at the force of the storm and took refuge in various downtown offices, while one resident, who was visiting on Kennedy Street, reported that he and a friend watched the display of sheet and forked lightning for nearly two hours from his at least twenty fires break out on the other side of the gulf.

PORTER CHAPTER ENJOYS PICNIC

Day's Outing at Roper Island Proves Interesting to Visitors

CHEMAINUS, July 12.—A most delightful picnic was given by Mrs. Goldsmith to members of the Porter Chapter, I.O.D.E., and their friends, on Thursday, as a means of raising "talent money" for the chapter. Mr. Goldsmith gave the use of his launch for the day, and such person paid a small sum for the day's outing.

It took two trips to convey everyone to the Indian industrial school on Roper Island, where the picnic was to be held, the first boat starting at 2 p.m. from the Government wharf.

Upon the arrival of the visitors, Rev. Father Williams met them and took them over the school, pointing out everything of interest and explaining the school routine in a most entertaining manner. Benches and tables were laid out by the schools. During the afternoon a short business meeting was held. Mrs. Hill, convener of Alexandra Rose Day, reported that the result of the last day amounted to $103.62. It was moved by Mrs. Ashby and seconded by Mrs. Hill, that a wheel chair be presented to the Chemainus General Hospital, and the balance, after procuring the chair, be divided between the Queen Alexandra Solarium and the Institution for Crippled Children in Vancouver. It was reported that two historical pictures had been presented to the Chemainus school and two to the Oyster Bay School. Five prize winners of the essay on "Empire Shopping Week," in the schools, Mrs. Rose and Mrs. A. Work were asked to inspect the child's cot presented by the chapter to the hospital, and to ascertain as to whether anything further was required for it, as there was money in hand to be used for that purpose. It was decided that there would be no meetings held during the month of August. Mrs. Hill asked that a letter of thanks be sent to the Oriental girls who helped tag on Rose Day.

LIGHTNING STARTS WASHINGTON FIRES

Saturday Storm Known to Have Caused Twenty-Eight Outbreaks in Forests

PORT ANGELES, Wash., July 14—Lightning caused at least twenty-eight fires which were burning today in the Olympic National Forest on the northern end of the Olympic Peninsula. The storm occurred Saturday night.

Eight of the twenty-eight were known to have burned over areas exceeding ten acres. Reports from the others had not been received. Fire fighters were bandicapped by a heavy mist which was hanging over the mountains, making it hard to locate the blaze or determine if others had been started.

Fire fighters today were being concentrated on the Elwa River to be dispatched if any of the blazes were not controlled by the small group now fighting them. Four of the fires were in that district while eight were near Hoodsport and sixteen near Quilcene.

Some of the fires were under control today and others were burning on cut-over lands, with little danger of a spread.

Died at Nanaimo

NANAIMO, July 14.—An exceptionally well-known resident in the person of James Felix Davidson passed away suddenly at the family residence, 321 Prideaux Street, at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, death apparently due to heart failure. He was employed by the city for a good many years until the time of his death.

Mr. Davidson appeared to be in his usual health, and was at his work up until noon, death being entirely unexpected. He was sixty years of age and a native of Ontario, and had resided in Nanaimo for the past forty years. He is survived by his widow here and brothers and sisters in Ontario. He was a member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

HELP FOR GIPSIES ASKED

Special legislation for the Gipsies in the Burgenland province, which formerly belonged to Hungary, is being urged by Dr. Schoenbauer, according to a Vienna correspondent. At present the Gipsies number about 7,000, he says. Most of them live in the southern district of the Burgenland, where the inhabitants were too good natured to stem their invasion. The Gipsies increase very quickly, and their huts are frequently crowded by ten or twenty persons. Only 254 of them have a regular profession; most of the others living by begging. During the past five years nearly 4,000 were punished for theft and other crimes. The police have taken finger prints of all beyond the age of fourteen. It seems very improbable that they will be assimilated in the course of time, declares Dr. Schoenbauer.

"ALL MOTHERS WILL KNOW HOW HAPPY I AM NOW"

Mrs. Hupp Relates Remarkable Experience of Self and Little Daughter With Sargon

"I know that all mothers will be interested in my wonderful experience with Sargon," declared Mrs. G. W. Hupp, of 2506 D. 30th St., Omaha. "I believe Sargon saved me from a breakdown and the child I bore! Her little ten-year-old daughter, Helen, was simply marvelous.

MRS. G. W. HUPP

"For seven years I suffered almost constantly with pains in my right side. At times I'd have such terrible attacks I just have to go to bed. I never slept well and was always run down. I couldn't attend to my duties or look after the children like I should. I was told that I'd never feel any better until I had my gall bladder removed.

"After three bottles of this wonderful medicine, my gall bladder trouble was relieved and I haven't had a headache since. The pain in my side subsided, I began to sleep better, and I grew stronger every day. Now I feel like a different person and can do all my housework without tiring.

"Sargon did me so much good I started giving it to my little girl, who never had been strong. Her appetite was finicky and her food didn't give her proper nourishment. She was so nervous, she couldn't get the rest she needed and they told her teacher at school not to give her physical exercises like the other children too, because she couldn't stand it.

"It just does my heart good to see how wonderfully Sargon has benefited her. Her appetite is fine and she gets proper nourishment from good, wholesome food. She's not nervous now, and sound, restful sleep has helped her gain strength and energy. Any mother can imagine how happy I am to have her well and strong again, and to see her play and romp with the other children without tiring like she used to.

"Sargon Pills are the gentlest, and yet the most effective laxative I ever used. My little girl didn't mind taking them at all because they didn't upset her like other laxatives always have. I don't feel it is to recommend this splendid treatment to my friends, or anyone who is sick or run down."

Sargon may be obtained in Victoria and Vancouver from all Owl Drug Stores and in New Westminster from the Bews' Drug Co.

The above deal is a good example of how an ill-advised negative double resulted in the loss of approximately 1,270 points in a recent Duplicate Contract Match in which the deal occurred.

In the actual bidding of the above deal, South opened with a bid of one Spade, although lacking the side requirements for the original bid of a such suit. West (my partner) doubled immediately (instead of overcalling with two Clubs. North bid but two Spades over the double instead of his proper Jump assist. North's assist to but two Spades permitted East to make a forcing response of four Diamonds to West's double. South bid four Spades, although holding no rebid values, over which West paused to consider whether to bid five Diamonds or five Clubs. He finally decided to bid five Diamonds. North passing, East also passed, as West's hesitation caused East to think that West's five Diamond assist was possibly doubtful.

South doubled five Diamonds, following which West appeared to be in great mental travail, the result of which was a redoubled, thinking in connection therewith, "well, if we have to lose on the hand, let us lose a little more, or vice versa."

North, frightened by the redouble, bid five Spades, which East, also frightened by South's double and West's indecision, passed, as did South. West now concluded to double the Five Spade bid, with the result that opponents went down one trick doubled, or 100 points on a deal wherein East and West should have easily reached a small slam in Clubs, with 100 honors when vulnerable, and thereby score 1470 points.

SALIENT POINTS OF THE BIDDING

Contract: North passing, East bids one Club. North passing, East bids two Diamonds, a forcing takeout. South passing, West bids four Diamonds. North passing, East, now assured that the two hands will fit, jumps to six Clubs, concluding the bidding.

Assuming South to have bid one Spade originally, as in the actual bidding, West two clubs, and North two Spades, East would bid five Diamonds, West five Diamonds, and East six Clubs, or if North jumped his assist to three Spades, East, not unable to make a forcing take-out with Diamonds, would have changed to a bid of six Clubs.

Auction: South passing, West bids one Club. North passing, East bids four Clubs to shut out a possibly embarrassing secondary Spade bid by South.

THE PLAY

Played at Clubs, West (Declarer) must make either a small slam or a grand slam, depending upon North's opening lead.

New York Market Active As Prices Move Upward When Professionals Buy

NEW YORK, July 14.—Operations for an advance were pursued vigorously on the Stock Exchange today. The move, sponsored by a small group of bullish professionals, rallied prominent shares as much as 5 points, with larger gains in numerous specialties.

Many of the old-time pool favorites were active. Vanadium, Livingston Pump, Radio-Keith-Orpheum, J. I. Case, Allied Chemical, Electric Auto Lite and Columbia Carbon were bid up sharply.

Efforts toward extending the rise were furthered by the strength in American Can, General Electric, American Tobacco, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, North American, Consolidated Gas, U.S. Steel, Atlantic, Union Pacific, New York Central and Houston Oil, which rallied 1 to 5 points.

Money was plentiful and call loans eased to 2 per cent from the previous rate of 2½-2.

Stocks up 2 to 3 points net included American Telephone, U.S. Steel, American Can, General Electric, Stark-Brunswick, Radio-Keith-Orpheum, Electric Power & Light, New York Central, Fox, Union Carbide, Sears Roebuck, Westinghouse Electric, Nickel Plate, Brewster-Warner, North American, R. H. Macy and Eastman Kodak gained 4 to 5.

Norfolk & Western, Vanadium, J. I. Case, Electric Auto Lite and Worthington Pump were up 7, and Allied Chemical 9.

Foreign exchange rates were firm. Both sterling cables and the French franc improved slightly.

The forward movement of bonds was practically halted in a dull and irregular session.

The two portions of the list of standard railroad and utility bonds was already firm in a thin market, and where positive strength was lacking, were small, reflecting some profit taking.

Market Continues in Doldrums — Home Leads Oils With Gain of Five Points

PEND OREILLE IS LEAD IN MINES

VANCOUVER, July 14.—The Vancouver Stock Exchange continued in the doldrums today as far as activity was concerned, with prices generally moving aimlessly about in narrow gauge. Home led the oils again, with a 5-cent advance to $.19, while 1-cent losses were suffered by A. P. Consolidated, Mayland Oil and McLeod Oil.

Pend Oreille led the mines with a gain of 16 cents to 1.25, while Big Missouri was off 2 cents at .64.

Tape Topics

While there was an absence of firm, both conservative and otherwise, on the New York Stock Exchange yesterday, market sentiment continued better, and it is said that a number of professionals have now switched to the bull side and that further gains in prices are looked for.

A large amount of orders had accumulated over the week-end, and for the first part of the day the market, which had opened firmly, continued with a strong undertone and was fairly active. Around noon the activity in share transactions slackened, but only but fractionally the gains of the morning. Later trading showed greater activity, and the session closed with prices still firm and rising. Call money renewed at 2½ per cent and was later obtainable at 2 per cent.

Among the stocks which recorded appreciable increases were: Union Pacific, which traveled from 2½ to 223½; Gillette, from 7½ to 75; Dupont, from 39¾ to 197; North American, from 86 to 89½; U. S. Steel, which made a nice run from 169½ to 183¾; Atchison, from 221½ to 225½; Pacific Light & Power, from 78½ to 81½, and United Aircraft, which went from 84½ to 87½. All the averages were up, industrials being 4.86, rails 2.13 and utilities 1.67. The total turnover of shares was larger at 2,731,000, with a broader interest in evidence.

With sales light in comparison with the last few weeks, Toronto leaders were slightly off, the biggest individual business being transacted in Aros, which held between 5c and 6c and the closing price of 5½c. Sherritt-Gordon sold from $1 40 to $1.35; Oriole, from 37c to 32c; Noranda, from $23.60 to $23.50; Howey, at 82c, and Paleoscopic from $3 to $1.85. Vipond went up from $1.38 to $1.31, and International Nickel from $24.25 to $24.50. Ajax and Norden oils, which of late have had heavy sales daily, yesterday were medium of smaller transaction. Ajax sold from $1 80 to $1.78 and Norden from $1.40 to $1 37.

"If the Conservatives win the election," says a wire received from Toronto yesterday, "it is reported that Dominion Textile should jump ten to fifteen points. That stock pays $5 per share, and is selling at approximately $60, yielding 8 per cent."

Sales continued small on the local oil market, with prices showing slight declines. A.P.C. sold at 74c, closing at 74c to 75c. C. & E. went from 70c to 66c, a new low for the stock. Calmont had transactions from $1 07 to $1.05, and Freehold at 19c, a new low. Home's closing price were $4.10 to $4.20. Mercury sold at 20c and Mayland 12c. There was little doing in the mines, in which department about 7,500 shares of stockmake changed hands from 5½ to 5½c. There were a few sales of Oregon Copper at 12c and 11c. Premier at 4.96 and Big Missouri, from 68c to 65c.

ENTIRE WORLD OIL INDUSTRY WILL BENEFIT

Refining Process Patents to Be Transferred to New Company — Ford After Fleet

OKLAHOMA OIL PRODUCTION CUT

(Reuters, Brawn & Co., Ltd.)

NEW YORK, July 14.—Transfer of the patents of the hydrogenation refining process from the John Dabney company formed some time ago by Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey and the German trust to Hydro Patents Co., newly formed in Delaware, to make the process available to the entire world oil industry, was announced late night by the Jersey company. At the same time the Standard officers released the names of the seventeen companies which hold shares in Hydro patents at the present time. The list includes virtually all the Standard companies as well as other leading refining organizations, such as Shell Union, The Texas Company, Vacuum and Atlantic Refining. Representatives of the companies involved, headed by Frank Howard, president of Standard, sail for Europe today to examine the results of the latest experiments and research in hydrogenation made in Germany and Great Britain.

TO ACQUIRE FLEET?

Ford Motor Co. was reported yesterday as being interested in the acquisition of the intercoastal steamer fleet operated by the Luckenbach Line, which has at one time or another been sought by various interests including the International Mercantile Marine Co. and the Pennroed Corporation. Whether International Mercantile Marine, which is already represented in the intercoastal trade with three outstanding vessels of Panama Pacific Line is interested is not known, but the report that Pennroed is still considering making an offer continues to go the rounds of shipping circles despite the fact that shipping men cannot see how this company can enter the intercoastal trade, in view of the Panama Canal Act, which prohibits railroads from operating steamship lines through ports in competition with other transcontinental railroads.

In line with an agreement by operators, production in Oklahoma City oil fields, one of the most prolific in the nation, was curtailed drastically yesterday for an indefinite period. Only unprorated proven wells and producers being drilled deeper are to continue unaffected under the agreement. When the wells are put back on production, probably in about two weeks, the allowable rate will be not more than 8 1-8 per cent, nor more than 30 per cent. Operators said the new figure probably will be accepted permitting the wells to flow one day out of each twelve-day period. The pipe line companies in Texas agree to handle a daily average of 1,250,000 barrels, a decrease of 19,000 barrels daily.

Standard Oil Announces New Refining Firm

NEW YORK, July 14. — The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey announced today organization of a company under which a new refining process is made available to seventeen oil companies. The announcement described the process as capable of doubling production.

Oil men expect the new process to become an important factor in the control of crude oil production and price cutting.

LACK OF MOISTURE HITS LARGE AREA IN SASKATCHEWAN

MOOSE JAW, Sask., July 14.—Lack of moisture and the return of the extreme heat of today will, unless there are immediate rains, very likely remove the last possibility of a crop in much of the 135 miles of territory between Moose Jaw and Swift Current. From Mortlach, thirty miles west of Moose Jaw, the following was received Monday:

"Crops in the district surrounding Mortlach have been very badly damaged by the heat and lack of moisture this past week. There is almost complete crop failures in some localities."

ART CHEAP FOR GERMAN POOR

Queen Nefretete, mother-in-law of King Tut, may, in plaster, grace the homes of any German, according to a plan for inexpensive art for the masses recently inaugurated by the great Berlin Museum. The bust of the queen, which has arrived in Berlin after a long argument between authorities of the museum and of Egypt as to its possession, is being molded in cheap compositions and colored so that it may be offered at prices which will can afford. Heads of Egyptian Pharaohs, Roman busts, Greek statues and Etruscan vases are among the reproductions offered in the name of art. Many famous and popular German sculptors have offered their services for the project free of charge, so that homes of the poor may be decorated with the prices

SMELTERS TO PROSPECT IN S.W. AFRICA

Valuable Rights Granted in Former German Territory to Consolidated M. & S. Co.

MARKS DEPARTURE IN FIRM'S POLICY

MONTREAL, July 14.—The British administrator of what was formerly German West Africa has granted the Consolidated Mining & Smelting Company of Canada, Limited, valuable rights in the territory of Southwest Africa, it was announced in a word received here today. The company will have the exclusive right to prospect, on favorable terms, over a large area for tin, copper and other base and precious metals.

It was believed here that the action of Hanseliani in seeking the African option marked a new departure the company in extending its operations beyond the confines of Canadian borders.

The Montreal head office of the company issued a statement giving details of the plans for developing the concession.

A mining engineer of the company in Southwest Africa, while J. J. Warren, president, is in England.

NOT PROSPECTED YET

The territory in question bears every evidence that a number of metals exist there, but they have not been prospected owing to the political and economic conditions prevailing. Southwest Africa is mandated to the Union of South Africa, and before the war was a German colony. In area approximately 322,400 square miles, it is bounded by Anvola, Rhodesia and the Union of South Africa.

The part of Southwest Africa already prospected and developed produces annually $100,000 in diamonds, it was stated here.

The main mineral is copper, while iron, gold, vanadium and other metals are known to exist.

UNITED FOUNDERS REPORT IS ISSUED

Includes Complete List of Investment Holdings of Corporation

(B.C. Bond Corporation, Ltd.)

United Founders Corporation is mailing to its some 8,000 shareholders a consolidated report for the first six months of its fiscal year, including for the first time a complete list of all investment holdings of the corporation and subsidiaries. The fiscal year of the company ends December 30, and the report covers the period from November 30, 1929, to May 31, 1930. The consolidated investment holdings of the company on May 31 had a market value of $286,924,404, which was $71,184,241 in excess of cost less investment reserves.

The report covers the operations and investments of United Founders Corporation, American Founders Corporation, four investment companies controlled by the latter, and Investment Trust Associates, with consolidated resources of $377,-589,789.

United Founders Corporation secured majority control of American Founders Corporation by an exchange of shares completed in March of this year, and the semi-annual report is the first to be made on the consolidated basis. It shows for the first time the net asset value of United Founders shares on the consolidated basis. The report states that while many American and British investment companies have never followed the practice of publishing their investment portfolios and while certain objections naturally arise against doing so, the consolidated portfolio of United Founders is published in accord with practice recently adopted by the New York Stock Exchange.

GROSS INCOME

Gross income for the six-month period is shown in the report as $11,858,264.51 and net income before appropriations and dividends as $9,931,962.59. After deductions for reserves, dividends and minority interests of subsidiary companies, the balance of income applicable to United Founders Corporation was $3,942,687.62. Consolidated earnings per common share on the average number of shares outstanding during the period were 77 cents, and the company had, in addition, an equity in the undistributed earnings for the period of affiliated companies equivalent to 18 cents per common share. The sum of these amounts is 95 cents per share.

The net improvement in the total market value of the consolidated portfolio, in relation to cost, between November 30, 1929, and May 31, 1930, after deducting loans charged to investment reserves, on 8,860,671 shares outstanding May 31, 1930, was equivalent to $1 08 per share.

United Founders Corporation is a holding and investment company over two-thirds of whose investments is in the shares of subsidiaries and important affiliates.

On the consolidated basis, eliminating all intercompany holdings, taking the value of the portfolio at market prices of May 31 and eliminating all deferred charges as well as the cost of securities of subsidiary companies in excess of their book values, the asset value of the common shares of United Founders was $21 61 per share. On a parent company basis which would mean considering the agreed value of American Founders Corporation

TORONTO, Ont., July 14.—H. F. Parkinson, secretary of Falconbridge Nickel, who has just returned from a visit to the property, last no time in contradicting the stock rumor to the effect that Falconbridge would suspend operations at the mine and the smelter. While the company received something of a setback when power was cut off at the time of the big storms in the district, and is still idle on this account, he said that it is expected that power will again be available on Tuesday, when operations will again be resumed on a full time basis.

Revision of the Creed and the holding of the young were considered paramount issues at a meeting of Scotland in the nine days' sitting of the General Assembly in Edinburgh, Scotland, this year. In his closing address the Moderator, Rev. Dr. Andrew N. Bogle, outlined the fundamental needs of the people of Scotland which had led to the revision of the Creed, and the need for the task which lay before the united church. Foremost among the duties of the church, he placed the revision of the Creed, in which matter, he said, the position of the church was indefensible. Dr. Bogle declared the clergy was not wholly succeeding in preventing the drift of youth from the church. When the church failed to hold the young, she failed because, as a result of her training, they had perhaps a habit, but no conversion.

Burgess Bedtime Stories

A Queer Use for a Tail

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

For everything there's some excuse; It must have had a use to use —Old Mother Nature.

Whenever Peter Rabbit was over long the Smiling Pool he watched out for Starmose the Mole, the little fur-coated chap who lived underground and had such a funny little nose. Once in a while Peter would get just a glimpse of him, but it was only a glimpse. You see, Starmose was the most timid creature in a while, doesn't stay out long. He doesn't want to run the risk of being picked up by a hungry enemy.

At last, however, it happened that Starmose had caught a very big worm and he had caught it in the surface. Instead of going down into the ground to eat it, he dragged it partly under a low-growing fern. Peter saw him do it. Peter said nothing until Starmose had finished that worm. Then Peter spoke

"How do you like that worm said he.

Just about as usual; just about as usual," squeaked Starmose rather impatiently.

"If you please," said Peter, "I wish you would tell me what use you have for a tail!"

Starmose gave me as you have for one and probably more." Starmose thought. For my part, I don't see what use you have for your tail. You don't seem to be able to use it every day of my life. I use it the same as my cousin, Miner the Common Mole, uses his."

"I didn't know that he did use his," replied Peter. "If you may be does, I suppose he does; but I didn't know that he did.

"But that doesn't tell me anything," persisted Peter. "Do you really and truly use your tail?"

"Of course I use it!" responded Starmose. "It is very handy to have something out in front of you when you are backing up."

"How can a tail be in front of you when it is behind you?" demanded Peter.

Starmose chuckled his squeaky little chuckle. "Well," said he, "when I am backing up in a hurry, running backwards in one of my little burrows, my tail is ahead in the direction I am going, isn't it?"

"I suppose so," said Peter somewhat doubtfully.

"Of course it is!" declared Starmose. "It is a sort of feeler, to tell me just the way I am going. Otherwise, when I am running backward I might run into trouble.

"I don't see what you want to run backward for in a hurry," said Peter.

"Because," replied Starmose, "it is the only way I can get back. There isn't room to turn around in one of my tunnels. I've either got to keep digging or else back up until I reach a place where I can turn around. But with a hard tail I can do it in time, and a useful tail to feel the way, it doesn't make much difference to me whether I am going forward or backward.

"What has your coat got to do with it?" demanded Peter.

"Everything," replied Starmose. "It's one of my fur ties with Mother Nature than given every member of the Mole family.

"I should say so!" exclaimed Peter. "I wish I had one like it."

RECOVERY BRINGS SHARP RALLY

Large Blocks of Stock Taken at Lower Levels on New York Exchange

NEW YORK, July 14 (by Cable) — The recovery in the market brought sharp buying in Paramount Publix and large blocks were taken at the highest levels on Saturday. The stock performed impressively during the tail-end of the reaction, any movement of the last few weeks, and its recovery should broaden now that the traditional summer lull is actually regaining its confidence. Even at the highest levels Paramount offered a yield of 7 per cent on the present dividend basis.

While generally each dividend must be scrutinized these days because conditions are such that in many cases they will be reduced shortly, the situation surrounding Paramount Publix assures the continuance of the current rate through the present trying period and holds out hopes of a higher return later on. It will be remembered that the company maintained a $2 rate throughout the last few years and increased it to $4 only the year. Such action in the face of a general decline must be construed as a constructive development.

The company has always been conservative in its financial policy and the present rate was decided upon after careful consideration of prospects. The amalgamation with the Canadian Famous Players, accomplished recently, strengthened the company's position to a considerable extent and greatly enhanced its future profits possibility. Technically the stock is in a strong position and should see no difficulty in extending the gains already recorded.

With the approach of the new season, which is now only a few weeks off, a better demand for issues in this group should develop and the more conservative to the list should be first to respond to this situation. Paramount Publix should be bought.

ALLIED CHEMICAL

Sharp gains between sales of a few hundred shares recorded by Allied Chemical in the latter part of the session, indicating that the buying supply of this issue is and now is in a fair position to be bought. Yet the situation is not so that one can say that before long we will see Allied Chemical anywhere near the 140 level it reached only a little while ago.

SS. NING CHOW IS NOW UP FOR SALE
Outstanded In Speed by New Motor Ship Kamloops Successor has Blue Funnel Line
Within the past year the Blue Funnel Line has dropped from its fleet some splendid vessels, and a recent exchange from Glasgow contained the information that the Sir Ning Chow, of the Blue Funnel Line, had been added to the list. She has been laid up in the Clyde, and is reported for sale.
The Ning Chow was built in 1902, a ship of the Kermoor class, which introduced the twin screw into the China Mail service, and it is interesting to note that she was the original ship of the name that had come from the same yard. Her original gross tonnage was 7,304, but before she had been in service very long this was reduced to 6,882 by triple expansion engines drove her at a speed of thirteen knots, although she ran fifteen knots at her trial. She was generally employed on the Far East run, and she had a deadweight capacity of 1,290 tons, and was regarded as one of the finest units of the fleet.
For a time she was in both the China and North Pacific trades. With Captain H. L. Allen aboard, the ship was chased by an enemy submarine off Lands End in March, 1915, but she speed enabled her to get away from the underwater craft. Bearing the termination of his next voyage, Captain Allen picked up Lord Montague, of Beaulieu, and a number of privatees of the Isle of Wight, who had been ordered to the Ning Chow's speed and the new motor vessels, which explains the reason for discarding her.

ITALY PLANS FINEST SHIP

In the Rev. construction of which is now under way, Italy believes it will have the finest ocean vessel in the world. It will be a palatial floating hotel with theatre, church, gymnasiums and two swimming pools. A wireless telephone will be installed in each stateroom. The liner will be 887 feet long, ninety-seven feet wide and will weigh 45,000 tons. Ten decks will compose her superstructure, six of which are to run the entire length of the vessel. The Sea will have a double bottom and will be divided into fourteen watertight compartments. These will keep afloat even when three adjoining compartments are flooded. Her engineers expect her steam turbine engines to develop 90,000 horsepower, giving the vessel a speed of twenty-seven knots.

Canadian Importer Goes Aground on Sunken Reef In Harbor of Chemainus

Shortly after leaving the lumber mill dock at Chemainus, where she took on 430,000 feet of lumber for St. Lawrence River ports, the ill-fated Canadian Importer, while manoeuvering to get under way, ran on the Hospital Reef, in Chemainus Harbor, at 1.20 o'clock Sunday afternoon, releasing herself again after having been aground for a short time.

The ship was to have completed cargo at Ogden Point and was due at the piers at 9.30 o'clock Sunday night, but all arrangements were cancelled and the ship was ordered to Esquimalt, where she berthed alongside the dockyard wall at 10.30 Sunday night.

Yesterday afternoon divers were sent under the ship and reported some slight damage to the plates from well forward to about midships and arrangements were made to dock the ship this morning, following which an inspection will be made.

Officials of the Canadian National Steamship Company, who came over from Vancouver on being advised of the mishap, stated last evening that they did not anticipate any great damage, as the ship was not making any water and, after effecting temporary repairs she will probably get away for Montreal not later than Friday of this week, completing cargo at Ogden Point as soon as she leaves the dock.

Late yesterday afternoon scows were sent alongside the Importer and her deck cargo was transferred to the scows in order to lighten the ship for docking, longshore crews working all night.

Benedict Bantly Is in a Reminiscent Mood on His Return to Former Home

Benedict Bantly, who, during an extended residence in Victoria, established a high place among musicians of the city, was in a reminiscent mood when he was seen by a Colonist reporter. Mr. Bantly now makes his home in California, but he has not forgotten the capital of British Columbia, where its sons many at the earlier days.

He finds the number of his old-time acquaintances becoming "fewer in the city and he also sees marked changes in the general features of this place.

"Having lived in Victoria from 1883 to 1902 and again from 1906 to 1922 and now after eight years to come as a tourist is somewhat of a novel experience," said Mr. Bantly.

"Born in California and brought to Victoria in my early childhood days I remember this place as a town of about ten or twelve thousand people," he added.

IN THE OLD DAYS

"Those were the days before street cars disturbed the peaceful inhabitants; the days of wooden sidewalks and verandas over the downtown sections; mud four or six inches deep in Winter and an equal depth of dust in Summer; the days of stores with wooden shutters which were carefully bolted each night.

"There was on each street corner an electric arc lamp; there were hacks and hansoms for the convenience of the travelling public, and trucks and drays for the moving of merchandise. The old Deluge Fire Hall on Yates Street used to ring an alarm that sent the chiffis down your spinal column and the old Opera House adjacent to the City Hall on Pandora Street boomed a tocsin that struck terror to one's heart; large cisterns of water were situated at the intersections of Johnson and at the intersections of Yates and Government and Fort and Government and at a few other prominent corners which in case of fires were quickly pumped dry.

"In those days the muskrats of the city were limited with four clusters of five or six large arc lights placed on double-height poles maybe 150 feet in height—one on Church Hill, another at the top of Pandora, another at Blanshard, near Herald and another at Government and Yates. It was before the swing bridge was placed over Victoria Harbor; before the E. & N. was built; when the George R. Starr still ran to Seattle in twelve hours, and later when the City of Kingston did it in eight hours, with a stop after four hours at the half-way point of Port Townsend.

NEWS OF THE DAY

"Frank Campbell used to post the news of the day on the bulletin board in front of his cigar store at the corner of Yates and Government; Birdcage Walk was decorated with the Parliament Buildings of those early days, which resembled huge birdcages; the hack-stand was located on Government Street from Fort to Yates, and the expressmen had to wait on Yates Street in front of the Board Exchange. Johnson Street was one continuous line of saloons. The streets at times were crowded with singing, reeling bluejackets; Hibben & Co. had a huge wooden book elevated on a tee-iron pole which the blue-jackets sometimes removed by way of a practical joke. Hendery's stock tolled the weary hours in front of his jewelry store near the famous Brown Jug, and the steps in front of the Belmont Saloon, near the James Bay Bridge, used to be a stumbling block to many who were weary and heavily laden. The mint flats of James Bay spread their aroma around miles of innocent territory. Beacon Hill was fenced in to permit of horse-racing, and the B.C. Agricultural Society gave their shows on Heywood Avenue in the huge fair building, which was later used as a barracks by "C" Battery. Caledonia Park was situated at the corner of Blanshard and Government and Niagara, and it was there that all the famous lacrosse games were played in the early nineties.

CHINATOWN ATTRACTIONS

"Chinatown still cherished queues which were sometimes tied together in crowds by mischievous Jack Tars and sometimes severed from the Oriental scalps and proudly displayed by these same jolly Bingbads just to provoke a fight. Chinatown would have one of its spectacular fires, which caused most of the terror-stricken inhabitants to pack up all their movable belongings to move if the wind should happen to change. Charles V. Fullips was chief of the volunteer fire brigade, with his coal-scuttle-like helmet and his red shirt, and his stalwart aide with flaming red shirts and megaphones.

"In the days of the regatta at the Gorge can you recall," asked Mr. Bantley, "the Indian tribes from all over B.C. who came to participate in the war canoe races; when the bluejackets of Her Majesty Queen Victoria took part in the boat races, and in the greased pole competitions; and the great sham battles at Beacon Hill.

"Open gambling was permitted then on the grounds surrounding the racecourse; men threw away all coins of less than a quarter of a dollar, and a person was ashamed to make purchases of less than a dime in value. A bit was long or short; the long bit being twelve and a half cents and the short one ten cents; free lunches were given away in the saloons with the purchase of a glass of beer.

"Stadthagen had a totem pole on Johnson Street. Polsto John and Lager Beer Johnnie walked the streets of Victoria, and Teeny and Maggie Wheeler terrorized the children of Victoria.

"Bicycles came into fashion, and every parties cycled to Cedar Hill, the Gorge and Saanich, and the hardy "sports" to Rocky Point in our sixty-pound bicycles. We danced the two-step, the Cosmos waltz, the Hippie, the barn dance, the scottische and the polka, besides the square dances, which were regarded as less wicked, like the lancers, quadrille, Sir Roger de Coverley, in the Sir William Wallace Hall, the Harmony Hall, Oliver's Hall, above Spencer's old place on Broad Street, and still later in the Drill Hall on Memorial Street.

WAY HAPPY DAYS

"Those were happy days, when men wore whiskers, sideburns, chin spots, mutton chops, Pauls and various other fantastic forms of adornment.

"One could hire a pacer or a trotter from the transfer stables on Government Street, where later Price's hardware store stood, and take one's girl on a long and lovely drive to Goldstream or Saanich; or, if you preferred the water, you could hire a boat from Dan McIntosh and for a few dimes could have a glorious time.

"But now all is changed," said Mr. Bantley with a sigh. "There are motor cars, radios and chain stores.

"In the days of Club Theatre, on Yates and Douglas, one could listen to the city band in front and sit on the sidewalk in front of Henry Jewel's store and enjoy a peaceful cigar and a chat.

"There may be a few left who cherish and remember the good old days when the Drunro Hotel and the Poodle Dog flourished under the superb management of Redon and Hartnagle and M. Escalet, the renowned chefs who held sway.

"Compare those days with our present feverish haste—our quick lunches, our rapid transportations, our meaningless jazz music, our tinsel film shows and now our canned variety of unnatural sounds and our slowing up of our film shows with slugish conversation. As for me, give me the old days of the spoken drama.

"A great change has come over dear old Victoria," declared Mr. Bantley. "Her natural beauties remain the same. Man cannot improve upon them, but her mandinds improvements are crowded upon all sides.

"During the eight years that have elapsed since 1922 many and great changes have taken place here.

"I do not know that everyone will accept this as a compliment," said Mr. Bentley, in conclusion, "but Victoria shows the life of a bustling American city, when one traverses her downtown streets, but of course her residential sections still cling to the traditions of her Old Country influences—may she ever keep that. That is an inheritance that never can be effaced in that gift-laden, God-favored beauty spot of this glorious British domain."
